DIGEST OF CASES	1

PREFACE.

THE object of this work is to furnish a comprehensive Index to the case law of India as laid down in the reported decisions of the High Courts and Privy Council, analogous to that already compiled of the statute law. It would perhaps be too much to hope that this object has been fully attained, but I can at least claim for it that it goes further towards success in that attainment than any previous work of the kind in India. I shall be satisfied with this attempt towards such an end if it be found in some degree useful to the Government in its legislation, to the judicial officers of Government, and last, but by no means least, to the members of all the branches of the profession to which I have the honour to belong.

The work contains the gist of the cases reported in 166 volumes of Reports extending over a period of fifty years,—viz., from 1836 to 1886. Besides the reports published in India it contains the cases in Moore's Indian Appeals, without which, of course, no digest of Indian Cases would be complete; and also such cases from the Law Reports, Indian Appeals, as are not reported in the Indian reports. The names of the reports are set out in the annexed list showing the periods over which they extend, the decisions of what Court they contain, and the abbreviations used for them in the references throughout the Digest.

With respect to a few of those volumes which have been reprinted, and in the later editions of which the paging is different from that in the original edition, I have given, wherever I could do so, both pagings. I think this difference of paging will be found with respect only to the first and second volumes of the Bombay Reports, the first volume of the N.-W. Provinces Reports, and the Agra Full Bench volume.

In some of the volumes—instances chiefly, however, confined to the Agra Reports—the paging is in some places manifestly incorrect, some pages having the same numbers. In these cases I have generally given the page which would have been correct had the paging been correctly continued.

In cases where it is not otherwise apparent that the case is a Privy Council or Full Bench decision, I have added in the reference the letters P. C. or F. B., as the case may be, to indicate this. It should be noticed that all the cases in the supplemental volume of the Bengal Law Reports are Full Bench cases. This is not the case, however, with the Full Bench volume of the Weekly Reporter containing cases decided in 1862-63; the letters W. R., F. B., therefore merely represent the abbreviation of the name of that volume, and do not necessarily imply that the case to which they are appended is a Full Bench case. In fact, as all the Full Bench cases in that volume are reported elsewhere, cases to which the letters W. R., F. B. alone are appended are probably not Full Bench cases, though some of them may be decided by more than two Judges.

With the names of the cases I have had great difficulty,—a difficulty which, from the character of Indian names, is, it seems to me, almost impossible to overcome. The general rule I have followed has been to cut out from the commencement of the names all prefixes and titles. The principal of these are Shahzada, Shah, Maharajah, Maharani, Rajah, Rani, Nawab, Sahib, Sri, Sreemutty, Mussamat, Bibi, Thakoor, Syed, Moulvie, Moonshee, Mir, Mirza, Hadji, Sheikh, Baboo, Coomar, Cowar or Kooer, and perhaps a few others. I have omitted these as far as possible with the object in view not only of greater brevity in the names, but also in order that, in the Index of Cases, names that are similar may come together, and not as they sometimes do in an index of names, some with the prefix or title and under one letter, and the same name without it under another letter. I have made exceptions to this rule only in cases where the name is given in the following form: "Maharajah of Vizianagram," "Rajah of Shivagunga," "Nawab Nazim of Bengal," &c.

As to the spelling of the names, I found it hopeless to attempt any consistency, for the various volumes of reports go through all the possible variations in the manner of spelling any particular Indian name, and I came to the conclusion that it was best to spell the cases as they appear in the reports. Had I adhered in all cases to any one mode of spelling, the result would have been that any cases spelt in the report in a different way would probably never be found by looking in the Index of Cases, or if discovered at all, only after much more expenditure of time and trouble than would be desirable; and such a method would, it seemed to me, lead in other ways to difficulty and confusion.

I at first intended to issue the work in not more than two volumes, but owing to the material having taken up more space in print than I imagined it would do, and it being desirable not to have the volumes of a bulk inconvenient for ready use and reference, it has been decided to issue it in five volumes to be published successively, and, if possible, within the present year. To each volume will be appended a table of the headings contained in it, and the last volume will contain a list of all the cases contained in the five volumes. The paging will be continuous throughout the work.

ABANDONMENT OF CHILDREN.

——— Penal Code, s. 317.—Section 317 of the Penal Code was intended to prevent the abandonment or desertion by a parent of his or her children of tender years in such a manner that the children, not being able to take care of themselves, may run the risk of dying or being injured. 1. ——— Ground of Abatement.—Causes beyond control.—Act X of 1859, s. 18.—The real meaning of section 18, Act X of 1859, is that the grounds for which an abatement of rent may be claimed by a ryot must have resulted from causes beyond his control. MUNSOOR ALI v. HARVEY

2. ——— Diluvion.—Act X of 1859, s. 18—(Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 19).—Deduction in suit for arrears of rent.—Rent of a talook may be abated if a portion of the talook be washed away. Independently of section 18, Act X of 1859, a suit for abatement of rent will lie by a talookdar on the ground that part of the talook has been washed away. A deduction may be made on such ground in a suit for arrears of rent. AFSUROODEEN v. SHOROOSHEE BALA DABEE . . Marsh 558
SAVI v. OBHOY NATH BOSE
[2 W. R., Act X, 27

3. ——— Diluvion.—Onus probandi.—The onus lies on the defendant in a suit for arrears of rent of proving to what deduction he is entitled, and of showing precisely what lands have disappeared. SAVI v. OBHOY NATH BOSE
[2 W. R., Act X, 27

4. ——— Diluvion.—Right of occupancy.—A tenant, whether with or without a right of occupancy, is entitled to abatement of rent for land washed away unless precluded by the term of his kabuliat from claiming any abatement. ENAYUTOOLAH v. ELAHEBUKSH
[W. R., 1864, Act X, 42

5. ——— Diluvion.—Cause of action.—When a diluvion takes place, a right of suit to obtain an abatement of jumma accrues from the time when the plaintiff is compelled to pay the rent named in his pottah without the allowance of the abatement claimed by him. BARRY v. ABDOOL ALI
[W. R., 1864, Act X, 64

6. ——— Diluvion.—Talook created before 1790.—Quære.—Whether the proprietor of a talook created before the Permanent Settlement can claim abatement of rent on the ground of diluvion. RAM CHURN BYSACK v. LUCAS
[16 W. R., 279

7. ——— Diluvion.—Waiver of right to deduction.—In a suit for arrears of rent of land adjacent to a river where defendant

claims deduction on account of diluvion, and it is found that the agreement under which he holds requires measurement to be made once in three years, no account being taken of accretion or decretion occurring within that period: if the tenant has waived his right of measurement and has held over, it must be presumed that he elects to continue to hold at the same jumma as before, and his claim to deduction cannot be allowed. KRISTO KINKUR PURAMANICK v. RAMDHUN CHETTANGIA
[24 W. R., 326

8. ——— Diluvion.—Kabuliat.—Sale by tenant of his tenure.—Suit against purchaser.—In a suit against the purchaser at an auction sale of a tenure under a kabuliat by which it was agreed that the former tenant should not be entitled to abatement of rent on any ground and should be liable for interest at a particular rate for all arrears of rent, the defendant pleaded that as auction purchaser he was not bound by the terms of the kabuliat; that he was entitled to abatement on the ground of diluvion of portion of the demised lands, and only bound to pay interest at a reasonable rate upon arrears of rent. Held, that defendant was bound by the terms of the kabuliat entered into by his predecessor. ISHAN CHUNDER CHOWDHRY v. CHUNDER KANT ROY . . 13 C. L. R., 55

9. ——— Diluvion.—Transferee of tenant, Right of, to abatement.—A tenant has a right to, and can claim an abatement of rent where the area of the land, the subject of his tenure, has been diminished by diluvion, and such right passes to a purchaser on a sale of the tenure. Prosunno Moyee Dossee v. Doya Moyee Dossee 22 W. R., 275 distinguished. KALI PRASANNA RAI v. DHANANJAI GHOSE . I. L. R. 11, Calc. 625

10. ——— Diluvion.—Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 18.—A ryot cannot sue for abatement of rent simply because the lands which he holds are rated higher than those of the same description and with similar advantages held by ryots of the same class in the vicinity. Bengal Act VIII of 1869, Section 18, refers to an alteration of area owing to a portion of the land having gone away by diluvion or otherwise—not to some difference in the length of the measuring pole in use at different periods. BABUN MUNDLE v. SHIB KOOMAREE BURMONEE . . 21 W. R., 404
PERTAB CHUNDER BANERJEE v. OMUR SIRDAR
affirmed in OMUR SIRDAR v. PERTAB CHUNDER BANERJEE . . . . 25 W. R. 212

11. ——— Damage to land by Cyclone.—Right of under-tenant to get remission of rent.—A landlord receiving remission from Government on account of damage done to his estate by a cyclone, is not on that account bound to allow a remission to his under-tenants, unless he received the former on the understanding or agreement that he would allow it in turn. GOLUCK CHUNDER MYTEE v. PARBUTTY CHURN DASS

12. ——— Error in measurement of land.—Land found to be less than stated.—A lease providing for enhancement if the lands are found on measurement to exceed the quantity stated in the lease, does not necessarily give the right to abate if the lands are found to be less than that stated in the lease. RAM KANT CHOWDHRY v. BINDABUN CHUNDER GOPE
[2 W. R., Act X, 71

13. ——— Error in measurement of land.—Construction of pottah.—Default of tenant.—Though a pottah provided for an abatement of defendant's rent if on measurement the land was found to be less than 145 beegahs, yet it was held that if defendant came to be in possession of that less quantity by his own default, and not that of the lessor, the mere fact of defendant having been in possession of less than 145 beegahs would not entitle him to an abatement. SEETANATH BOSE v. SHAMCHAND MITTER 17 W. R., 418

14. ——— Error in measurement of land.—Ryot having paid no rent.—Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 19.—A ryot who has held his land for a few months, and paid no rent at all, cannot sue for an abatement of rent on the ground that the land, on measurement, is less than the quantity mentioned in his pottah. BROJONATH KOONDOO CHOWDRY v. UNANT RAM DUTT
[17 W. R., 449

15. ——— Misrepresentation as to quantity of land.—In a suit by a putnidar to recover rent in accordance with the terms of a dur-putni lease, the defendant claimed an abatement of his putni rent on the ground that his predecessor had obtained such abatement in a previous rent suit, in which it appeared that the lessor's share was slightly less than what was described in the lease.—Held that unless the defendant could show that he had been damaged by the plaintiff's misrepresentation as to the extent of his share, he could not be relieved from his contract, in this form of suit at least. GOUR MOHUN ROY v. RADHA ROMUN SINGH . . . 21 W. R., 372

16. ——— Misrepresentation as to quantity of land.—Delay in suing.—In 1859 G entered into negociations with respect to the purchase of a certain talook at premium of R42,411 and an annual rent of R48,070, and in January 1860 he signed a sale-bond which contained an enumeration of the mouzahs purchased, the actual sale being completed in the 2nd June following. Until his death in December 1861 he paid the stipulated rent according to the terms of the deed. Subsequently his widow brought a suit for abatement of the rent on the ground that her husband had been misled as to the amount of rent payable by the under-tenants,—Held (affirming the decision of the High Court of Calcutta) that under the circumstances the suit could not be maintained. DARIMBYA DEBBYA v. NILMONEY SINGH DEO

17. ——— Misrepresentation as to quantity of land.—Act X of 1859, ss. 18 and 23, cl. 3.—Section 18, Act X of 1859, is not applicable to a case in which a plaintiff putnidar sues for an abatement of rent, on the ground of fraud caused by the concealment from him of the existence of an intermediate tenure created by the zemindar. Clause 3, Section 23 of that Act, is wide enough to admit of such a suit being tried by the Revenue Courts. SHOKOOR ALI v. UMOLA AHALYA [8 W. R., 504

18. ——— Misrepresentation as to quantity of land.—Denial of right to assess lands in tenure.—A suit in which the plaintiff alleges that rent was wrongly assessed on him for lands not covered by his pottah, and contends that in assessing his rent these lands should be included, is not in the nature of a suit for abatement of rent. 19. ——— Breach of Contract.—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.—In a suit for damages by a lessee, where the plaint shows a distinct prayer for abatement of rent, and also sets forth as the main ground of the suit a fraudulent breach of contract by misrepresentation and refusal of deduction and refund stipulated for, so much of the claim as refers to abatement is, by Clause 3, Section 23, Act X of 1859, beyond the jurisdiction of the Civil Court; but the rest of the suit is properly cognizable by such Court. 20. ——— Reduction of rent payable by landlord to Government.—Act X of 1859, ss. 17 and 18.—Sections 17 and 18 were passed for the benefit of the ryot, and not for the protection of the zemindar. Section 18 was intended to give the ryot a right to abatement in certain cases, but not to protect the zemindar from liability to make abatement in any other case. In a suit for abatement of rent on the ground that the jumma payable to Government had been reduced upon condition that the rents of the ryot should be reduced in a like proportion,—Held that the right to abatement applies only to the case of rents of which the amount had been fixed before the jumma was reduced by Government, and not to rents fixed by pottahs or kabuliats entered into subsequently. But where, under such circumstances, the tenant is holding more land than is covered by his pottah, it is not necessary that his landlords, if desirous of enhancing the rent, should be referred to a separate suit for that purpose. 22. ——— Land taken for public purposes.—Suit to recover share of money taken as compensation for land.—In a suit to recover the proportion of money paid into Court as compensation for land taken for a railway, to which the plaintiff, a dur-putnidar, may be entitled, and in which suit the zemindar and putnidar are defendants, the plaintiff cannot claim abatement of rent under Act X of 1859, section 18, since such a claim is cognizable only in a suit instituted under that Act. GORDON STUART & CO. v. MOHATAB CHAND . . Marsh, 490

23. ——— Land taken for public purposes.—Claim to deduction from rent.—A claim for rent being a recurring cause of action, a tenant is entitled to set up against it for any particular year any right which he had to a deduction or abatement, notwithstanding that he has paid full rent for several previous years. When land is taken away for railway purposes, and compensation made, which is divided between the zemindar and those holding under him, any deduction of rent claimed from the zemindar must be reckoned with reference, not to the gross amount of compensation, but to the proportion which passed into his hands. MOHATAB CHAND v. CHITTRO COOMAREE BIBEE [16 W. R., 201

24. ——— Land taken for public purposes.—In a suit for rent by a zemindar against a putnidar, the latter claimed abatement of the rent on the ground that part of the land included in the putni tenure had been acquired by the Government for public purposes. The kabuliat executed by the putnidar contained a provision to the effect that, if any of the land settled should be taken up by Government for public purposes, the zemindar and the putnidar should divide and take in equal shares the compensation money, and a further provision to the effect that the putnidar should "make no objection on the score of diluvion or any other cause to pay the rent fixed or reserved by this kabuliat." Held that the putnidar was entitled to abatement of the rent. 25. ——— Land taken for public purposes.—Ijara Settlement.—Deduction from Rent.—An ijaradar took on lease certain lands, giving a kabuliat which contained the following clause:—"In regard to the aforesaid rent we take upon ourselves the risk of flood and drought, of death and flight, of alluvion and diluvion, of profit and loss. In no case shall we be able to claim a reduction in the rent, nor will it be open to you to demand more on account of alluvion, &c." During the lease part of these lands were taken up by Government for the purpose of a railway, and compensation was paid to the lessor therefor. The ijaradar claimed to make a deduction from his rent for the land taken away from him. Held that such a claim did not come

The putni was subsequently sold under Regulation VIII of 1819, with notice of the amount of the original rent, and the purchaser now sued for abatement of that rent. He did not allege that he held no notice of the proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act. Held that the plaintiff must be presumed to have had notice of these proceedings, and that it was therefore incumbent upon him to have made inquiry regarding the position of the putni, and that under the circumstances he was not entitled to the abatement sought for. PEARI MOHUN MUKERJEE v. AUDHIRAJ AFTAB CHAND [10 C. L. R., 526

The rent payable was admitted to be at the rate of Rs. 4 per biggah. In 1881 the defendants sued the plaintiff for rent of a larger amount than the plaintiff admitted to be due, and obtained a decree on the 31st May 1881. On the 20th September 1881, the plaintiff instituted a suit, nominally under the provisions of section 19 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869 for abatement of rent, upon the ground that the defendants were seeking to charge him rent upon a larger amount of land than he actually held. The Court found that the amount of land held by the plaintiff was the amount stated by him in his plaint, and not that alleged by the defendants. Held that the suit was rather one for the apportionment of rent after the butwara proceedings, and not one for abatement of rent. DURGA PERSHAD v. GHOSITA GORIA

40. ——— Effect of decision of Civil Court on decree of Revenue Court.—Suit for excess payments of rent after decree for abatement. —A putnidar sued his zemindar and obtained a decree for abatement of the putni rent, on the ground that the assets of the putni fell short of the amount stated in the lease. While this suit was pending in the Civil Court, the zemindar brought a suit for the rent of two years upon the full jumma; and though the putnidar objected that his suit for abatement was pending, the Collector decreed the rent suit in full. In execution, the zemindar recovered the full rent, and the putnidar then sued for a refund of excess payments and of the interest realized by the zemindar thereon.—Held that the decree of the Revenue Court was superseded and modified by the decree of the Civil Court which was subsequently affirmed in appeal.—Held that the plaintiff's cause of action accrued on the date on which the zemindar recovered from him rent in excess of what he was justly liable for, and also interest on such excess.—Held (on reference to the decree) that the abatement was to take effect from the commencement of the putni lease. 1. ——— Omission to give information of offence.—Penal Code, s. 107.—An omission to give information that a crime has been committed does not, under section 107 of the Penal Code, amount to abetment, unless such omission involves a breach of a legal obligation. A private individual is not bound by any law to give information of any offence which he has seen committed. QUEEN v. KHADIM SHEIK . . . . 4 B. L. R., A. Cr., 7

The declaration of forfeiture directed to be made in section 184 was intended to be in furtherance of a matter of procedure, and not simply as a mode of punishment for contempt of process; therefore, where it is not made before the person affected by the proclamation has come in, or has been brought in, it ought not to be made at all. 4. ——— Mahomedan widow in possession for dower.—Suit not framed for an account.—In a suit by the only brother and heir-at-law of a Mahomedan of the Shiah sect, claiming the whole of the deceased's estate, and for mesne profits, the issues raised by the pleadings were, first, whether a marriage had taken place between the deceased and the party in possession, who claimed to be his widow, and secondly, the validity of a deed of dower executed by the deceased in her favour. The Courts in India found these issues in favour of the widow and dismissed the suit. The Judicial Committee, in affirming the Court's decrees upon these points, held further, that although the estate of the husband was hypothecated for the dower, yet as the heir-at-law would be entitled to the residue after satisfying the widow's claim, he was by right entitled to an account, but as the plaint was so framed as not to admit of an account being taken, the appeal was affirmed, without prejudice to a suit being brought for administration of the deceased's estate upon the footing of the marriage and deed of dower being admitted in the suit.—AMEEROONNISSA v. MORADONNISSA . . . . 6 Moore's I. The plaint also alleged that, in consequence of the defendant's negligence and mismanagement, the plaintiff believed that he had sustained a loss of Rs. 5,000, and prayed for a decree for this sum. Held that no decree could be made for the sums mentioned, or any other sum, until an account had been taken and the amount due from the defendant ascertained. This decree may be enforced under section 260 of the Civil Procedure Code. After an account has been filed, the plaintiff should be allowed reasonable time to examine it. If the objections are numerous, the procedure prescribed by sections 394 and 395 and Form 157 of schedule iv to the Code should be followed. The said accounts rendered have been examined by the plaintiff, who verily believes that the true balance now due to him thereon exceeds Rs. 1,00,000, without including interest." After long negotiations and discussion respecting some of the charges, an agreement was come to, the parties agreeing to strike the general balance at a given sum, reserving one item of the account, amounting to a considerable sum, for future investigation. This reserved item was subsequently settled by the acceptance of a Bill of Exchange for a lesser amount, as such reserved item if re-opened would have disarranged the settled general account. The Bill of Exchange was dishonored and an action brought to recover the amount. A bill was then filed for an injunction for the cancelment of the Bill of Exchange, and praying that the accounts so settled might be opened. The Supreme Court at Calcutta held that the reserved item being left open was evidence that the account was not finally closed and decreed the accounts to be opened, referring the cause to the master. On appeal, held by the Judicial Committee (reversing such decree, and dismissing the bill with costs) that the transaction amounted to an adjustment of the general account between the parties, subject to the reserved item which was subsequently settled, and that the accounts so settled and closed could not in the absence of fraud be reopened. The first rule established by section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, does not apparently contemplate land other than that commonly known as alluvion, viz., land gained by gradual and imperceptible accretion, the incrementum latens of the civil law. There is no express provision in the Regulation for the case of land which has been lost to the original proprietor by the encroachment of the sea or a river, and which, after diluviation, reappears on the recession of the sea or river, and there is nothing to take away or destroy the original proprietor's right; such a case is to be determined by the general principles of equity and justice under the 5th rule contained in section 4. If, after the land comes into existence and is capable of cultivation, it is taken into possession and occupied, the subsequent drying up of the channel between such land and the shore does not affect the occupier's right to possession as against every one except the Government or one who can show a better title. In 1876, K. was entirely submerged by the Ganges. On the 20th September 1877, F.'s share was sold in execution of a decree, and the auction-purchaser was put in possession. In the sale certificate, the village M. was named, without specific mention of either of the two mehals, and the Government revenue referred to was the amount assessed on U. only. Subsequently the river receded, and part of K. was again left dry, and it was treated by the revenue authorities as having accreted by alluvion to U., in the proprietary possession of the auction-purchaser. Held that this view was erroneous, inasmuch as, before the auction-sale of 20th September 1877, the two properties were separate, being separately assessed with revenue, and the incidents of the ownership of one could not affect the ownership of the other; and since there was no such rule of law as would justify the proposition that simply because two

27. ——— Acquiescence in title, by conduct.—In a suit to recover possession of property it was held on the evidence that the plaintiffs had acquiesced in defendant's title, by their conduct. JEEBUN MUNDAL v. NADYAR CHAND ROY
[25 W. R., 461

28. ——— Conduct defeating title.—Evidence of ratification.—The plaintiff, a member of an undivided Hindu family, sued to recover a parcel of land which he alleged his uncle, the first defendant, to have wrongly transferred to the second defendant. The second defendant alleged a sale to him by the first defendant and a subsequent sale to the third defendant, and denied the plaintiff's title. The Munsif gave a decree for the plaintiff; on appeal the Principal Sudder Amin finding that the plaintiff knew of the sale and treating the knowledge as evidence of acquiescence in it, reversed the decision of the Munsif. Held, reversing the decision of the Principal Sudder Amin, that such knowledge would not make the plaintiff a party to the sale by the first defendant, so as to bar his right to recover the land for which he sued in ejectment. A person who seeks to bar one who is primâ facie the legal owner, by evidence of ratification, or of facts cogent enough to prove one not a formal to be a substantial party, must make and prove such a case, for he is one who seeks to displace a legal title. RAJAN v. BASUVA CHETTI [2 Mad., 428

29. ——— Presumption from allowing grant of certificate unopposed.—In a rival claim between two Hindu widows of a deceased husband the plaintiff sued as mother and guardian of her infant son to establish his right as son and heir of his father. One defence among others was that the son was not legitimate and could not inherit. His legitimacy was established but the incapacity to inherit was sought to be proved by the plaintiff's virtual acknowledgment of the defendant's title as heiress on the grant to the defendant unopposed by the plaintiff of a certificate of heirship. Held that it was not the practice of the Courts in India or of the Privy Council to press against either an infant or a Hindu female a presumption by acquiescence in a rival claim from the mere non-contestation for a limited time of an adverse title. RAMAMANI AMMAL v. KULANTHI NAUCHEAR [17 W. R. 1: 14 Moore's I. A., 346

30. ——— Not objecting to sale.—Suit to recover property sold.—Presumption of Consent.—Where R. K., acting ostensibly as recognized agent and manager of the family, sold part of the family property to the ancestors of the defendants, and the plaintiff who was then of age did not object to the sale, but afterwards sued to set aside the sale as to his share, on the ground that the property had been purchased by R. K. with the joint funds while the plaintiff was a minor and that it was sold by him without authority, the first Court gave him a decree for a one-fourth share of the property. R. K. appealed, but the other defendants did not appeal. The Judge, assuming the lower Court's finding to be correct, held that as plaintiff, who was of age at the time, did not object to the sale, he could not recover possession of property sold by R. K. as the recognized agent and manager. Held that R. K. could not found any right upon the presumption of plaintiff's consent, however such presumption might have availed the other defendants, purchasers from R. K., who had not appealed. GOPAL CHUNDER LAHOORY v. ROY KISHORE LAHOORY 15 W. R., 467

31. ——— Account made in course of usual dealing.—The defendant in a suit for balance of payments made by plaintiff on his behalf, held not entitled to refuse to be bound by an account made up in accordance with the course of dealing which had practically been assented to by him and had been followed between the parties for many years. THAKOOR PERSHAD SINGH v. MOHESH LALL [24 W. R., 390

ACQUIESCENCE—continued.

32. ——— Sending agent to settle rent.—Acquiescence in rate.—The sending of an agent by a tenant to settle with the landlord as to the rent is not a virtual acquiescence in the rate of rent demanded. STALKART v. LALLA BHURRUT LALL . . . W. R. 1864, Act X, 115

33. ——— Receipt of rent in lieu of grant of land.—In a suit to recover possession of land it appeared that the defendant's father had in 1801 obtained possession on a lease of 280 bigahs from the Government of Kulabo, and that the plaintiff's father had in 1806 obtained a grant of 10 unspecified bigahs of the same land, but that he never asked to have them marked out and given to him in specie, and that he, and subsequently his sons, the plaintiffs, were content up to the year 1856 to receive from the defendant's family in respect of their grant the rent formerly paid by them to the Government for the same. The District Court reversed the decree of the Moonsiff, and threw out the claim to recover possession of the land on the ground that the plaintiffs must be taken after such a lapse of time to have acquiesced in the arrangement that a yearly rent was to be received without any particular land being marked out as theirs. Held that it was competent for the Assistant Judge to come to that conclusion under the circumstances, and that there was no ground for saying that there was any error of law in his decision, which was accordingly affirmed. SULE v. DHUNDIRAJ VENAYAK 3 Bom., A. C., 55

34. ——— Accepting lower rent than that entitled to for long time.—Where a landlord who may originally have had a right to collect a higher rent is for a long period of years content to accept a lower, it would be manifestly unjust to allow him to turn round upon the tenant at any time he pleases and demand the higher rent. ROOCHA RAM MISR v. NAGA DOSS . . 2 N. W., 92

35. ——— Long possession by tenant without lease.—An under-tenant who has dug a tank and been in possession undisturbed by the former proprietor for a long period, such acquiescence being equivalent to a lease, cannot be ejected by the putnidar. SREEMUNT RAM DEY v. KOOKOOR CHAND [15 W. R., 481

36. ——— Allowing part owner to work forfeiture of tenure as if full owner.—Waiver of forfeiture.—Claim of portion of tenure.—If A. allows B. to deal with an occupancy tenure as full owner, and by an attempted transfer, to work a forfeiture thereof without any objection on his part, A. will not be allowed to come in afterwards and claim a part of the forfeited holding on the ground that B. was only part owner, and could, therefore, only work a forfeiture of his own share. 1. ———— Seizure of Raj of Tanjore.—Jurisdiction of Municipal Courts—Independent States.—The transactions of Independent States between each other are governed by other laws than those which Municipal Courts administer. The seizure by the British Government, acting as a sovereign power, through its delegate, the East India Company, of the Raj of Tanjore, with the property belonging thereto, was, with its consequences, an act of State over which a Municipal Court has no jurisdiction. 3. ———— Resumption of Jagir by East India Company.—Regulation law.—Where lands were held by a jagirdar under the sovereign of an independent State on a jaidad tenure, i.e., on a grant of land, together with the public revenues thereof, on the condition of keeping up a body of troops to be employed when called on in the service of the sovereign, and on the conquest of the State by the East India Company, the jagirdar remained in the same position to the Company,—Held, that the resumption of the lands by the Company, and the seizure of the arms and stores appertaining to the tenure, on the death of the jagirdar, was not an act of State, and therefore the Municipal Courts had jurisdiction to entertain a suit by the representatives of the jagirdar against the Government for the possession of the land, and for the value of the arms and stores. This was so, although, at the time of the resumption, the Regulation law was not introduced into the territories in which the jagir was comprised. FORRESTER v. SECRETARY OF STATE

4. ———— Confiscation of territories of King of Delhi—Forfeiture.—The status of the King of Delhi was that of a King recognized by the British Government; and the confiscation of his territories in 1857 was an act of State, and not an act done under color of any legal right of which a Municipal Court could take cognizance. His tenure of the territories assigned him by the Government was a tenure merely durante regno, and no power was conferred upon him of creating incumbrances which would survive his deposition. The word 'confiscation' does not necessarily import that the appropriation is to be made as a penalty for a crime, nor, when used in that sense, does it necessarily imply that the forfeiture has accrued upon conviction; but it may also be properly used as applicable to appropriations of property by Government as an act of State. 5. ———— Confiscation by Governor of Foreign State.—Title to timber.—The plaintiff brought a suit at Tonghoo in British Burma to recover possession of certain timber, which he alleged the defendants had wrongfully and in collusion with the Burmese Governor of Ninghan, taken out of his possession in foreign territory and removed to Tonghoo. The defendants stated that they had acquired the timber from the Governor of Ninghan in terms of an agreement between them and the Burmese Government. It appeared that the Governor of Ninghan had confiscated the plaintiff's timber in contravention of a royal mandate. After the institution of the suit, the defendants removed the timber from Tonghoo to Rangoon.—Held, that a British Municipal Court might enquire into the character of the act of the Governor of Ninghan, and was not bound to accept it as an act of State. 6. ——— Resumption by Government —Act of State—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.—By the treaty of the 31st July 1801 between the then Nawab of the Carnatic and the Governor in Council at Madras the sovereign rights of the Nawab in the Carnatic were vested in the East India Company.—Held that a resumption by the Madras Government of a Jaghir granted by former Nawabs, as Altamghah inam, before the date of the treaty and a re-grant by the Madras Government to another for a life estate only, was such an act of sovereign power by the East India Company as precluded the Supreme Court at Madras from taking cognizance of a suit by the heirs of the original grantee in respect of such resumption. 7. ——— Resumption of village granted by Peishwa of the Deccan.—A village having been granted in inam by the Peishwa of the Deccan was, after the death of the grantee, seized by the mamlutdar or farmer of the revenues for an alleged debt due to him, and retained until the treaty of Poona in 1818 when it came into the possession of the British Government. In a suit instituted by the representatives of the original grantee for possession of the village, and payment of the arrears of revenue so sequestered, it was held by the Judicial Committee, affirming the decree of the Provincial and Sudder Courts, that the original resumption was the wrongful act of an individual, and not an act of the State: the British Government were therefore ordered to restore the village, but pursuant to Bom. 2. ——— Right of Suit.—Effect of an order for additional assessment.—Certain land, which formed part of the plaintiff's zemindari, became, on its re-formation after submergence by a change in the course of the River Ganges, attached to the zemindari of J., and it being found so attached, an additional jumma was, after proceedings taken by the revenue authorities under Act IX of 1847, assessed against J. in respect of it. In a suit in the Civil Court brought by the plaintiff against the Government, J., and L., an ijaradar under J., to recover possession of the land,—held, that the suit was not barred by the proceedings under Act IX of 1847. Section 6 of that Act makes the orders passed under its provisions final only against the zemindar, not against third persons. Nor would section 9 bar the suit; the words of that section do not necessarily extend to forbidding a suit brought to recover property which the Government or its officers may be instrumental in keeping away from the rightful owner. Held on the facts, that the Government had not, by the proceedings under Act IX of 1847, or otherwise, interfered with the plaintiff's rights so as to entitle him to relief against it in the present suit. 1. ——— XIII—Award.—Decision on non-appearance of parties.—Act XIII of 1848 "for the greater security of possessory titles in the Presidency of Bengal, derived from awards made by the revenue authorities under Regulation VII of 1822, Regulation IX of 1825, and Regulation IX of 1833 of the Bengal Code," by section 3, enacted that no suit should be entertained for contesting the justice of any award of the revenue authorities under any of these regulations made after the passing of the Act, after the expiration of three years from the date of the final award. A suit for the amendment of a map was referred by the Deputy Collector to an Ameen for the purpose of a local investigation, and the Ameen returned that, neither of the parties appearing before him, he was unable to make the investigation, whereupon the Deputy Collector struck the case out. Held, that this was not an award within the meaning of the Act. GOLAM KOODSEE CHOWDHRY v. RASHU CHUNDER GHOSE . Marsh., 323

2. ——— In order to apply the provisions of Act XIII of 1848 in regard to limitation, it was necessary to show that there was an award, i.e., an adjudication after a contention between the parties before the survey authorities. HUREEE MOHUN THAKOOR v. ANDREWS W. R., 1864, 30

3. ——— Suit to assess land—Boundary suit.—Act XIII of 1848 did not apply to bar a suit to assess land as rent-paying. A decision in a boundary suit decides only the question of right to possession of the land, irrespective of the right to assess. MAHOMED ALI KHAN CHOWDHRY v. JADUB CHUNDER CHUCKERBUTTY . W. R., 1864, 60

4. ——— Awards made by Collectors.—Beng. Regs. VII of 1822, IX of 1825, and IX of 1833.—Act XIII of 1848 was limited to awards made by Collectors under Bengal Regulation VII of 1822, IX of 1825, and IX of 1833, which gave to the revenue authorities judicial power to determine questions of possession and other matters with a right of appeal to the regular Courts against their awards. An order of the Collector for the mutation of names in the register is not an award of the nature contemplated by the Regulation XIII of 1848, and an appeal from it was not subject to the limitation of three years prescribed thereby. JEWALA BUKSH v. DHARUM SINGH
[10 Moore's I. A., 511

5. ——— Settlement award.—Suit to set aside.—Act XIII of 1848 applied only to suits for contesting the justice of an award as between the contending parties, and not to suits for the purpose of amending a settlement and establishing the rights of persons who were not parties contesting between themselves before the Collector. IX of 1825.—Act XIII of 1848.—Evidence of possession.*—A thakbust award of boundary made in the Lower Provinces may be an award, under Regulation IX of 1815, within the meaning of Act XIII of 1848. It would in any case be material evidence of possession. PRAHLAD SEN v. RAJENDRA KISHOR SINGH

7. ——— Award.—Decision under Butwara Law.—The decision of a Collector under the Butwara Law was not an award within the meaning of Act XIII of 1848. Act XIII of 1848 only applies to awards made by the revenue authorities under Regulations VII of 1822, IX of 1825, and IX of 1833. PULTOO ROY v. GREEDHAREE SINGH

8. ——— Order of Collector under Reg. VII of 1822.—The order of a Deputy Collector under Regulation VII, 1822, declaring the lands in dispute to be paykan jaghír lands, was an award within the meaning of Act XIII of 1848, and any suit to set it aside had to be brought within three years of the order. MODHOOSOODUN SINGH v. PURTEE BULLUB PAUL . . W. R., 1864, 140

9. ——— Order of Collector rejecting claim to alluvial land.—The order of a Collector rejecting a claim to alluvial lands on the ground that a settlement of them had already been concluded, was not an award within the meaning of section 3, Act XIII of 1848. SHURUT SOONDERY DABEE v. THE GOVERNMENT . 7 W. R., 42

10. ——— Rejection of claim by survey officer.—The rejection by a survey officer of a claim because it had not been brought forward sooner, was not an award within the scope of the special limitation of Act XIII of 1848. SHAMA SOONDERY DABEE v. PROSONNO COOMAR TAGORE
[1 W. R., 114

11. ——— Award adopting order under Act IV of 1840.—An award of survey authorities adopting an Act IV order was not illegal, and was consequently governed by limitation under Act XIII of 1848. RAMGUTTY NAG CHOWDHRY v. BURODACHURN BOSE . . . 1 W. R., 120

12. ——— Order of Superintendent of Survey striking off appeal.—An order of a Superintendent of Survey striking off an appeal was not an award within the meaning of Act XIII of 1848. SHAM KANT BANERJEE v. GOPAL LALL TAGORE . . . . . 1 W. R., 328

3. ——— Guardian and Minor.—Ground for refusal of certificate.—An application for a certificate under Act XL of 1858 (which, if successful, would, in effect, prolong the minority of an infant from eighteen to twenty-one) should not be granted when the alleged minor is admittedly on the point of attaining the age of eighteen, unless under particular circumstances, as where very great weakness of mind is proved, or where it is shown that there is some absolute necessity for making such order. 5. ——— Minority.—Majority Act (IX of 1875), s. 3.—A certificate of guardianship under Act XL of 1858 takes effect, not from the date when it is applied for, nor when an order granting it is passed, but from the date when it is actually issued. Therefore where an application for a certificate was made in 1877, and an order granting it was passed in December 1879, but the certificate was not issued until December 1881, —Held, that the minor, in respect of whose property the certificate was applied for who had between the date of the application and the issue of the certificate attained the age of 18 years, and signed a promissory note, was not entitled to take advantage of section 3 of the Majority Act, 1875, and set up the plea of minority as a defence to a suit on the note. 6. ——— Guardian, Appointment of.—Period from which appointment dates.—The making of an order appointing a guardian under Act XL of 1858, and not the subsequent taking out of the certificate, is that by which a guardian is appointed of the person and property of a minor within the meaning of section 3 of the Indian Majority Act. CHUNEE MUL JOHARY v. BROJONATH ROY CHOWDHRY . . I. L. R., 8 Calc., 967 [11 C. L. R., 315

7. ——— Period from which authority of guardian dates.—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 6.—Section 6 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), which says that a certificate under Act XL of 1858 (among other documents) "shall not be filed, exhibited, or recorded in any Court of Justice or received or furnished by any public officer," unless a certain fee be paid, means that such certificate cannot come into existence until the person who has the permission of the Court to obtain it deposits the requisite amount of stamp duty. Independently of this section, however, the preparation of such a certificate after the order granting it, is not a purely ministerial act: it must then be applied for by the grantee: and it is from the date of the certificate being actually taken out, and not from the date of the order granting it, that a guardian of the person and property of a minor is to be considered as appointed under Act XL of 1858. Where, therefore, on a petition for such a certificate by J., an order was made that the "application be allowed," and in a suit on certain bonds in which suit the minor in respect of whose person and property the petition for a certificate was made, was a defendant, he was represented by J., by whom no certificate had been actually taken out. Held, in a suit by the minor to set aside the decree as not binding on him, that without the certificate J. had no authority to appear on behalf of the minor, and the latter not having been properly represented in the suit brought against him was entitled to have the decree set aside. Stephen v. *Stephen, I. On the death of J., leaving H., his widow, and an infant son by her, H. applied for a similar certificate, under Act XL of 1858, with respect to the property of her son, and it appeared that K. was incapable of managing the property. Held, that though the certificate granted to L. had been improperly obtained, H. was not entitled to one, as, no partition having taken place since B.'s death, the property was still the joint family property. 1. ——— s. 18.—Power of Guardians.—Certificated Guardians.—Power of Uncertificated Guardians.—Managers.—The rules laid down in Act XL of 1858, from section 18 downwards, apply only to certificated managers and to guardians appointed under the Act. Section 18 applies in terms to a manager acting under a certificate, and to such manager only; it confers on him generally the powers of the owner, but in regard to acts of alienation beyond certain limits, it requires that his acts, in order to be valid, should have the previous sanction of the Court; such provisions are altogether unsuitable to the case of a manager entirely unconnected with the Court. 3. ——— Mortgage by guardian without sanction of the Court.—Where a guardian had mortgaged certain property of a minor without previously obtaining the sanction of the Court under section 18 of Act XL of 1858, but it was found that the mortgage transaction was a proper one, and there had since been a decree in a suit in which the minor was properly represented under which the property had been sold, the irregularity as to the mortgage being made without the sanction of the Court was not allowed to prevail. 5. ——— Sale by Guardian without sanction of the Court.—Invalidity of sale.—Refund of purchase-money.—A sale of a minor's immoveable property by a guardian appointed under Act XL of 1858, and who was also the kurta of the joint family of which the minor was a member, is invalid if made without the sanction required by section 18 of that Act, even though the sale may have been for the benefit of the minor and made in good faith to pay off the debts of the ancestor. Where, however, it was found that the purchaser had acted bonâ fide and had paid a fair price for the property, he was held entitled to a refund of so much of the purchase-money as had been expended for the benefit of the minor. 6. ——— Mortgage by Administrator of a minor's property.—Purchaser with notice, Title of.—Duties of Purchaser.—A mortgage of the property of a minor made by the administrator appointed under Act XL of 1858 is invalid, unless the sanction of the Court has been previously obtained under section 18 of the Act. Where the administrator was sued, as representing the minor, by the mortgagee, and made no defence to the suit, and the property was sold, under a decree so obtained, to the mortgagee, by whom it was again sold to a third person, who knew that the administrator had executed the mortgage in that capacity,—Held, that the decree did not protect the mortgagee who purchased at the Court sale, nor her vendee, from suit by the minor for recovery of the property. 7. ——— Mortgage by certificate-holder without sanction.—Contract Act IX of 1872, s. 23.—A mortgage by a person holding a certificate of administration in respect of the estate of a minor under Act XL of 1858 of immoveable property belonging to the minor without the sanction of the Civil Court previously obtained is void with reference to section 18 of that Act and section 23 of the Contract Act, even though the mortgage-money was advanced to liquidate ancestral debts and to save ancestral property from sale in the execution of a decree. CHIMMAN SINGH v. SUBRAN KUAR [I. L. R., 2 All., 902

8. ——— Power of Guardian.—Purchaser from Guardian.—Per GARTH, C. J.—Previously to the passing of Act XL of 1858, where a suit was brought by a minor on coming of age, to recover property sold by his guardian during his minority, it was generally incumbent upon the purchaser to prove that he acted in good faith; that he made proper enquiries as to the necessity for the sale; and had honestly satisfied himself of the existence of that necessity. Now, under section 18 of that Act, the Civil Court not only has the power, but is bound to enquire into the circumstances of each case, and to determine whether, as a matter of law and prudence, it is right that any proposed sale or mortgage of the minor's property should take place; and if the Court, upon the materials and information brought before it by the guardian, makes an order for sale, a purchaser under such an order is not bound to make the same enquiry which the Judge has made, and to determine for himself whether the Judge has done his duty properly and come to a right conclusion. Where a plaintiff alleges fraud or illegality as a ground for setting aside a sale made under section 18, the onus lies upon him to make out a primâ facie case of fraud or illegality, and to show that the debt, which formed the consideration for the sale in such case, was one for which the minor was not responsible. Per PRINSEP, J.—A stranger purchasing from a guardian, acting under the authority granted under section 18 of Act XL of 1858, will be entitled to every protection from the Courts, so long as it is not shown that he acted in a fraudulent or collusive manner, knowing that the debts, for the liquidation of which the purchase-money would be applied, were not debts lawfully binding on the minor. The burden of proof in such a case would lie heavily on the person seeking to set aside the alienation. But where the purchaser is himself the creditor, and therefore has the means of satisfying a Court as to the origin and nature of the debts and how they are binding on the minor, the burden of proof is shifted on the purchaser, when the plaintiff has established a primâ facie case. It appeared that such money was advanced by way of loan, and without any reference to the wages of such workmen or the payment for the work performed by them, and that no deduction on account of such advance was ever made from their wages or the payments made to them. Held, that the contract between the parties was something quite

5. ——— Suit to compel heir of manager to make good deficiency.—Leave of Court.—Act XX of 1863 does not apply to a suit brought by the dharmakarta of a temple and one of its worshippers to compel the defendant, as heir of the late manager, to make good, out of the property inherited by him, the deficiency in the devasthanam funds caused by breach of trust and misappropriation by the late manager. The leave of the Civil Court for the institution of such a suit is not necessary, and the suit is maintainable. The right of instituting such suits is not a privilege accorded by Act XX of 1863, but a pre-existing right. JEYANGARULAVARU v. DURMA DOSSJI . . 4 Mad., 2

6. ——— Suit to eject Dharmakarta or agents from temple.—Right of Government to divest itself of power of interfering with appointment.—Madras Reg. VII of 1817.—Plaintiffs, members of the committee appointed under Act XX of 1863, sued to eject defendants (the dharmakarta and his agents) from the possession and management of the temple dedicated to Sri Viraragava Swami at Trivellore and to establish their (plaintiffs') right to the possession and control of the said temple. Defendants denied the right of the plaintiffs to exercise any control whatever over the temple. This right depended upon whether, at the period of the passing of Act XX of 1863, the nomination vested in, was exercised by, or was subject to the confirmation of, the Government, or any public officer. It was admitted that, in 1842, the Board of Revenue did, so far as it could, divest itself of all right to interfere with the appointment of dharmakarta, but it was contended for the plaintiffs that it was not in the power of the Board of Revenue so to divest itself of the duties imposed upon it by Regulation VII of 1817. Held that, assuming the Board of Revenue to have had such a right, there was nothing in Regulation VII of 1817 to prevent them from renouncing that right if they chose. The Civil Judge found that the grant was for the performance of religious ceremonies and pious observances only, and that the plaintiff had led a vicious life and been guilty of malversation in his office, and, being of opinion that the plaintiff had been properly deprived of the lands belonging to the muth, under Madras Regulation VII of 1817, dismissed the suit. Held, that under section 4 of Act XX of 1863 the plaintiff became entitled on the passing of the Act to the restoration of the endowment. 3. ———Right to control affairs of temple.—Transfer of property.—Form of order.—Right of suit.—In 1849, the Board of Revenue, acting under Bengal Regulation XIX of 1810, interfered in the management of the affairs of a temple. In a suit relating to the affairs of the temple instituted in 1878, it did not appear whether any transfer of property had been made under section 4 of Act XX of 1863, but it did appear that, in 1865, the Judge of Patna had appointed a manager of the temple. Held, that the right of the Government officers to control the affairs of the temple had been sufficiently proved. The plaintiffs were appointed trustees in place of the defendant by the members who dismissed the defendant. Held, that the appointment of the plaintiffs was invalid under section 7, Act XX of 1863, and that they were not entitled to sue the defendant. 2. ——— Right to sue for removal of trustees.—Religious endowment.—Section 14 of Act XX of 1863 is sufficiently general in its terms to empower any person interested in any temple, mosque, or religious endowment, or in the performance of the trusts relating thereto, to sue the trustee, manager, or superintendent, or the member of a committee appointed under the Act, for misfeasance, and also to empower the Court to order the removal of a trustee, &c. The tomb of a reputed saint became a place of pilgrimage and an endowment was made for the maintenance of the shrine and for the performances of certain religious ceremonies. There was a practice on the part of the proprietors and the managers of the institution to divide among themselves the residue of the income, and to dispose by way of sale or mortgage of the share enjoyed by them. Held, that this was a religious institution within the meaning of Act XX of 1863. The 14th section of the Act empowers the Civil Court to remove trustees for misfeasance, &c., and it does not recognize any difference in respect of trustees whether hereditary or selected. 3. ——— Suit to restrain manager from allowing property to be removed.—Form of order.—Injunction—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 30.—Section 14 of Act XX of 1863 is generally applicable to all religious endowments, and while it in one sense restrains the ordinary Courts from dealing with cases against trustees of religious endowments, it gives special facilities for suits in the principal Civil Court of the district by any of the persons interested in these endowments. Quære,—Whether, considering the provisions of section 30 of the Civil Procedure Code, the retention of section 14 of Act XX of 1863 is at all necessary? An order under section 14, Act XX of 1863 should be mandatory, and not prohibitory. Where a sacred book was kept at a temple, and was an object of veneration to the members of the sect entitled to worship there,—Held, that a suit would lie under section 14 of Act XX of 1863, by some of the persons interested in the temple, to restrain the superintendent from removing the book to another place, and that he should be directed to retain it as a portion of the furniture of the temple. 4. ——— Trustee of Temple, Qualifications of.—Duty of Committee—Misfeasance.—Act XX of 1863 does not require that a person appointed by a committee to be a trustee of a temple should be of any particular sect, and although it may be desirable that the trustee of a temple should be of the sect to which the temple belongs, the appointment of a Sivite to be trustee of a Vishnuvite temple does not amount to an act of misfeasance, neglect, or breach of trust on the part of the committee within the meaning of section 14 of the Act. 6. ——— Suit to recover land on behalf of temple.—The provisions of section 14 of Act XX of 1863 (Religious Endowments Act) do not oust the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts except in the cases specified therein. A suit for recovery of immoveable property on behalf of a temple, alleging, by way of misfeasance and breach of trust, that the defendants (the managers of the temple) had forged documents and usurped temple property, without any prayer for the removal of the managers, or for damages, or for a decree for specific performance of any act by the managers, is not a suit for which a special jurisdiction is provided by the Act. 7. ——— Trustee, manager, or superintendent of mosque.—Application of Act.—The words "trustee, manager, or superintendent of a mosque," &c., mentioned in Act XX of 1863, mean the trustee, manager, or superintendent of a mosque, &c., to which the provisions of the Act are applicable, not the trustee, &c., of any mosque. And such persons are those to whom the provisions of Regulation XIX of 1810 were applicable. The mosques, &c., to which the provisions of that Regulation were applicable, were mosques for the support of which endowments had been granted in land by the Government of the country or by individuals; and the mosques, &c., to which the provisions of Act XX of 1863 apply are, not any mosques, &c., but any mosques for the support of which endowments in land have been made by the Government or private individuals. 1. ——— Leave to sue.—Public and private endowments.—Reg. XIX of 1810—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.—Suit to remove Mutwalli.—A., a Mahomedan lady, executed a wakfnama purporting to dedicate the whole of her property to an imambara in her house, for the purpose of perpetuating various Shiah ceremonies. By the wakfnama she constituted herself joint-mutwalli with one B., and caused the names of herself and B. as mutwallis to be substituted in the Collector's register for her own name as owner. On the death of B., A. acted as the sole mutwalli. The wakfnama was publicly registered. But though the property was styled "wakf," and A. the mutwalli thereof, in all documents connected with the estate, A. all along continued to deal with it as absolute proprietress, and the dedication, though made in 1852, was never under the control of the Board of Revenue or of local agents. In a suit, which the plaintiffs obtained leave to institute under section 18 of Act XX of 1863, to remove A. from the mutwallship, on the ground of misfeasance,—Held, the wakfnama did not constitute a public religious establishment within the meaning of Act XX of 1863, and that, therefore, the Judge below had no authority to give the plaintiffs, under section 18, leave to sue; and that his decision was consequently ultra vires. Section 18 of Act XX of 1863 applies only to such religious establishments as were under the control or superintendence of the Board of Revenue or of local agents under Regulation XIX of 1810, and were transferred to trustees or managers under section 4 of the Act. ACTION IN REM—Owner indirectly impleaded.—Towage Contract.—Vice-Admiralty.—The M. S., a steam tug, was hired to tow the barque N. down the Hughli, and in consequence of the negligence of the master of the tug whilst so employed, and of his wilful disobedience to the order of the pilot on board the N., the latter ran foul of a sailing vessel, the S. F., considerable damage being done to both sailing vessels. The S. F. took proceedings against the N. for the damage sustained, and an action in rem was brought (pending the proceedings taken by the S. F.) by the N. against the tug to recover damages, including any damages that the N. might have to pay to the owners of the S. F. The defence set up by the tug was, protection under its towage contract, which was to the effect that the proprietors of the tug should not be responsible under any circumstances for any loss or damage to any vessel whilst in tow of the tug, whether the same should have happened through the default of the master or other sailors, &c., of the tug, or through the incompetence or want of skill of the pilot in charge. The Court below held that the accident was due to the wilful disobedience of the master of the tug in not obeying the pilot on board the N., and that such misconduct was a "default" within the meaning of the clause in the towage contract; but inasmuch as the action was one in rem and not against the proprietors, the clause was no answer to the suit. Held on appeal, that the clause was a sufficient answer; for that, although in every case of a proceeding in rem the suit is directly against the ship itself, still the owner of the ship must always be considered as indirectly impleaded. 1. ——— Petition for administration summons.—Plaint.—A petition for an administration summons may be ordered to be taken as a plaint, and as the foundation of an administration suit. IN THE MATTER OF THE ESTATE OF FENN. MACKINTOSH v. WILKINSON . 3 B. L. R., Ap. 3

2. ——— Suit for share of estate of deceased.—Recorder, Power of.—Where one son of a deceased party sued in the Recorder's Court another son who had obtained a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, for his share of the deceased's estate, it was held that the Recorder had no power to transform the suit into a general administration suit. OH LING TEE v. AWKINIFEE . . 10 W. R., 86

3. ——— Suit by creditor.—Misjoinder.—Multifariousness.—Practice.—The principle of the rules that the creditor of a deceased person suing for administration is in the same situation with regard to all other persons as if he were bringing an action at law against the administrator, and that a debtor to the estate of a deceased person can only be made answerable as such debtor by the representative of the deceased's estate, is to be adhered to in this country, where there is a different procedure. Therefore, where, to a suit brought against the Administrator-General as administrator of the estate of one W. B. by a creditor of the deceased, other persons who also had a claim against the estate were made defendants, on the allegation that they had realized and were in possession of assets of the estate of the deceased,—Held, that there being nothing to show that such persons were in the position of an executor or administrator de son tort, or that they had been partners with the deceased, or that they could not be sued, if necessary, by the legal representative himself, and there being no other circumstances which would make it equitable that they should be sued jointly with the legal representative, they were wrongly made parties, and the suit ought to be dismissed as against them for misjoinder. Even assuming the facts were such that the plaintiff was entitled to sue them as legal representatives of the estate, he should not mix his own claim with that which the Administrator-General might have against them. 4. ——— Suit by creditor on behalf of all other creditors.—Legal personal representative.—Receiver, Suit by.—Persons interested in the estate of a testator, not being the legal personal representatives of the testator, will not be allowed to sue persons possessed of assets belonging to the testator, unless it is satisfactorily made out that there exist assets which might be recovered, and which, but for such suit, would probably be lost to the estate. Such a suit may be supported where the relations between the legal personal representative and the debtor to the estate present a substantial impediment to the prosecution by the legal personal representative of a suit against the debtor to recover the assets of the testator, and where there is a strong probability of the loss of such assets unless such a suit be allowed. But where there is an administration suit already pending, the proper course to pursue is to obtain an order in the administration suit, directing either a suit to be brought in the name of the legal personal representative, or appointing a Receiver to sue; and in this country the Courts might have the power to direct such Receiver to sue in his own name.

In a suit supplemental to the former suit, the descendants of the sons of N., amongst whom were the descendants of A. and B., claimed to be entitled to their share in the interest on the funds in the hands of the Court, and sought for a division of such accumulation of interest. Held that, notwithstanding that the debt due from A. and B. to the estate was barred, the descendants of A. and B. could not be allowed to share in the accumulations of interest in the hands of the Court without first satisfying the debt due by their ancestors to the estate. ADMINISTRATOR-GENERAL'S ACT XXIV OF 1867—continued.

——— s. 33.—Right to payment out of assets.—Distribution of assets.—Plaintiff, on the 15th June, 1868, immediately after the death of his debtor, brought a suit against the debtor's widow (1st defendant) for recovery of the debt, and, before judgment, obtained attachment and sale of property of the deceased, the sale-proceeds being kept in deposit in the Court. These proceedings took place in June and July; and on the 15th August administration was granted to the Administrator-General, the widow not having taken out administration. On the 28th September, the Administrator-General was, on plaintiff's application, made defendant in place of the widow, and the suit proceeded against him to decree. Before plaintiff applied to execute this decree, the amount of the sale-proceeds was, by the direction of the Civil Judge, handed over to the Administrator-General; accordingly, on this ground, plaintiff's application to the District Moonsiff for execution was rejected. He appealed unsuccessfully to the Civil Court.—Held, on special appeal, that section 33 of Act XXIV of 1867 took away plaintiff's right to payment otherwise than rateably with the other creditors. The mere fact that the admissions were contained in statements filed in a Court of Justice in her name does not necessarily prove that they were made by her. He now sued for the recovery of the property under an ekrarnamah which did not stipulate for payment of interest. Held, that the case put forward by plaintiff in the former suit did not amount to an admission that there was an agreement to pay 12 per cent., and that he was entitled to restoration of the property on payment of the principal alone. The ijaradars then brought a suit against the jotedars, amongst whom was the witness above mentioned, to recover the sum which the jotedars ought to have paid to the zemindar direct, and which the ijaradars had been decreed to pay. The jotedars disclaimed all liability to pay rent to the ijaradars; in this suit the evidence given by the jotedar in the zemindar's suit was received as evidence on behalf of the plaintiffs against all the defendants. Held, that the evidence was admissible. In the face of such admission, however, the party seeking to get out of its effects must make out his case by very clear evidence. MAHOMED HANEEF MEAJEE v. MOZHUR ALI . . . . 15 W. R., 280

65. ——— False statement as to share being separate.—Joint family.—Misrepresentation.—In a suit by a member of a joint family to recover possession of certain property alleged to belong to the joint estate, but which had been purchased by the defendant at a sale in execution of a decree passed against the estate of R., one of the members of the family, for his separate debt, the defendant alleged, as showing the property was the separate property of R., that, on one occasion, when *R. BOODH SINGH DHOODORIA v. GUNESH CHUNDER SEN [12 B. L. R., P. C., 317: 19 W. R., 356

66. ——— False statement by defendant.—A plaintiff cannot take advantage of a statement made by a defendant which at most amounts to a piece of evidence, and not to an admission, but which is found to be untrue, unless it be shown that the status of the plaintiff had been affected, or that he had been misled by such statement. GRISH CHUNDER GHOSE v. ISSAR CHUNDER MOOKERJEE [3 B. L. R., A. C., 337: 12 W. R., 226

70. ——— Admission not acted on.—Decision opposed to admission.—A mere admission is not conclusive. It is so only in certain cases,—e.g., where it has been acted upon by the party to whom it was made. Thus a statement made in a former suit in which the Court, so far from acting upon it, passed a decree opposed to it, cannot be treated as conclusive. An admission made by defendants' ancestor may be evidence of some weight that may be used against them; but it is only evidence upon which the Court which is trying the suit may act or not according as it considers it ought to have effect given to it. AJMERE COURTS REGULATION, 1877, ss. 17, 18, 21, 36, 37.

——— Reference to the High Court by the Chief Commissioner of Ajmere and Mairwara.—Reference to Chief Commissioner by Commissioner of Ajmere.—Appeal from Commissioner's decree made in accordance with Chief Commissioner's judgment.—On an appeal from a decision in a civil suit of the Assistant Commissioner of Ajmere to the Commissioner of Ajmere, the latter, feeling doubtful on a question of the nature specified in section 17 of the Ajmere Courts Regulation I of 1877, referred such question, under section 36 of that Regulation, to the Chief Commissioner of Ajmere and Mairwara. The Chief Commissioner dealt with the case as prescribed in section 37 of that Regulation, and returned it to the Commissioner, who dismissed the suit in accordance with the Chief Commissioner's judgment. The plaintiff preferred an appeal to the Chief Commissioner from the Commissioner's decision. The Chief Commissioner did not make any order on the memorandum of appeal admitting it, or directing that it should be registered, or that the respondent should be summoned, or that the appellant should appear on a certain day under section 551 of Act X of 1877; but issued a notice to the appellant's counsel to appear on a certain day. The appellant's counsel appeared on that day, and the Chief Commissioner intimated that he was acting under section 551 of Act X of 1877. The appellant's counsel then proceeded to address the Chief Commissioner, and was heard for some time, and then stopped in consequence of the Chief Commissioner resolving to refer to the High Court the question whether the appeal from the Commissioner's decision lay to him or to Her Majesty in Council. The Chief Commissioner subsequently referred such question to the High Court. Held by the Full Bench (SPANKIE, J., dissenting), on a reference by the Division Bench before which the Chief Commissioner's reference came, that such question arose "in the trial of an appeal" within the meaning of section 21 of the Ajmere Courts Regulation I of 1877, and was properly referred to the High Court. Held by the Division Bench (SPANKIE, J., and STRAIGHT, J.), that the appeal from the Commissioner's decision lay, in this particular case, not to the Chief Commissioner, but to Her Majesty in Council. in the execution of the decree of certain moneys deposited in Court to the credit of the judgment-debtor. On the 4th June 1877, the Court of first instance refused the attachment, on the ground that the decree directed the sale of certain immoveable property for its satisfaction and awarded no other relief. The order of the Court of first instance was affirmed by the lower Appellate Court on the 4th August 1877. Act X of 1877, repealing Act VIII of 1859 and Act XXIII of 1861, came into force on the 1st October 1877. On the 13th November 1877, the decree-holder applied to the High Court for the admission of a second appeal from the order of the lower appellate Court, on the ground that the decree had been misconstrued. Held, that an appeal was admissible under the repealed Act VIII of 1859, under the provisions of section 6 of Act I of 1868.—Held also, that the order of the lower Appellate Court was also appealable under Act X of 1877. 48. ——— Judgment on award.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 325, 327.—Finality of decree.—On the application of one party to a reference to arbitration, without the intervention of a Court, to have the award filed and for judgment thereon, an objection of the other party that the award had been come to after the arbitrators' authority had been repudiated, was overruled, and judgment was passed by the Munsif in accordance with the award. Held (PAUL, J., dissenting), an appeal lay from the decision of the Munsif. In another case the question was referred to a Full Bench, whether, when an award has been ordered to be filed, and judgment has been given in accordance with it, under section 327 of Act VIII of 1859, is such judgment open to appeal? The answer given (PAUL, J., dissenting) was: It is open to an appellant to show that the paper which has been filed is not an award. The arbitrator made his award, and on the next day an order was recorded by the Munsif that the parties were to file their objections to the award in one day, notwithstanding that section 324, Act VIII of 1859, allows the parties ten days for such purpose. The plaintiffs, in accordance with that order, filed a petition of objection to the award, and an order was endorsed by the Munsif on this petition, that it should be laid before the Court with the papers of the arbitrator. The Munsif then gave his judgment, in which he went into the evidence, and, overruling the objection of the plaintiffs, gave a decision on the merits, which decision was in accordance with the award. Held, that such judgment, though in accordance with the award, was not final under section 325 of Act VIII of 1859, but was open to appeal. In order to make it final, it should appear that all the proceedings have been regular, and the directions of Act VIII of 1859 complied with. GUNGA NARAIN GHOSE v. RAM CHAND BOSE . 12 B. L. 51. ——— In a suit in the Munsif's Court seven issues were fixed for determination, and the suit was then referred by agreement to three arbitrators. In coming to an award the arbitrators took up specifically some of the issues framed in the Munsif's Court, and declined to enter into others. They determined the matter in issue between the parties, and the award was signed by the three arbitrators. Two of the arbitrators subjoined to the award a suggestion which, if acted on, would prevent the necessity of carrying out the award. The Munsif dealt with this suggestion as surplusage, and gave the plaintiff a decree in accordance with the award signed by the three arbitrators. In appeal it was contended that the award was not a legal one, and it was sought to set the decree of the Munsif aside; but the Judge found that the decree was in accordance with the award, and that he was precluded by section 325 from disturbing the decision of the Munsif. On special appeal it was contended that the award was incomplete as all the issues were not decided, and that the decree was not in accordance with the award as it did not embody the suggestion of the two of the three arbitrators. Held, that the decree was in accordance with the award, and was, therefore, final under section 325. The Munsif refused to uphold the award, on the ground that the arbitrators had been guilty of misconduct in giving an award contrary to the evidence. The Judge reversed their decision, on the ground that the Munsif had no jurisdiction to refer to the evidence taken before the arbitrators in order to determine whether they were guilty of misconduct or not: he gave judgment in accordance with the award. Held, that his decision was not final under section 325, Act VIII of 1859: the provisions of that section refer only to the Court by which the case is referred to arbitration. The Munsif was entitled to refer to the evidence before the arbitrators in order to determine whether they had misconducted themselves or not. PARESHNATH DEY v. NABIN CHANDRA DUTT [5 B. L. 77. ——————— Order rejecting appeal.—Civil Procedure Code, s. 525.—Matters to be decided upon application to file an award.—Court fee on such application.—No appeal lines from an order upon an application to file an award under section 525 of the Civil Procedure Code. Upon an application to file an award under section 525 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court to which the application is made has no jurisdiction to enquire whether the defendant has agreed to the terms of the instrument referring the matter to arbitration, or whether the terms were obtained by fraud. When such objections are made, it is the duty of the Court to reject the application under section 525, and refer the parties to a regular suit. BIJADHUR BHAGUT v. MONOHUR BHUGUT . I. L. The case came on again before SCOTT, J., who decided to take evidence on the points left undetermined by the Government Surveyor. Witnesses were accordingly examined, and on 11th December 1883 the Court disallowed the defendant's claim of set-off, and gave judgment for the plaintiff for half the sum certified by the Government Surveyor as the cost of the disputed part of the wall. On the 1st February 1883, the plaintiff, who was an agriculturist, presented an application for review to the Special Judge appointed under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act. His application was rejected by that Judge, who was of opinion that the plaintiff's remedy lay in an appeal to the District Judge. The plaintiff was not informed of the result of his application to the Special Judge until the following May, at which time the Court of the District Judge was closed for vacation. On the 3rd June 1883 he presented an appeal on the opening of the District Court. The District Judge dismissed the appeal as barred by limitation. The Munsif found both objections against them, and allowed the purchaser to execute the decree. Held, that the question was one between the parties to the suit or their representatives relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree, and that the decision of that question was a decree under sections 2 and 244 of the Code and therefore appealable, and a second appeal lay therefrom to the High Court. In a plaint filed in the Court of a Subordinate Judge the plaintiff claimed to recover possession of a house, together with some grain which was stored in it. The plaintiff applied to the Subordinate Judge for leave, under section 44, Rule a, of the Civil Procedure Code, to join the claim for grain with the claim for possession of the house. The Subordinate Judge refused leave, and returned the plaint, with directions that the plaintiff should institute two suits for recovery of the house and the grain, respectively, in the Court of the Munsif. Held, that the Subordinate Judge's order was substantially an order rejecting the plaint, on the ground that the plaintiff had joined a cause of action with a suit for recovery of immoveable property; that, although this might have been a misapplication of section 44, Rule a, of the Code, its effect was to reject the plaint; that such an order was a decree, with reference to the definition in section 2, and was appealable as such to the District Judge; and that therefore a second appeal lay in the case to the High Court, and that Court was not competent to interfere in revision under section 622. 119.—An ex parte decree of June 1865, kept alive by successive applications for execution, was subsequently set aside on an application of 14th August 1871 (within 30 days after attachment in execution) made under Act VIII of 1859, section 119, and a judgment was passed on the merits. The lower Appellate Court reversed the order setting aside the ex parte decree. Held that, in so far as the Munsif had decided that the application was in time, he did not come under section 119, and therefore his order was not final, and the lower Appellate Court had jurisdiction to enquire into his proceedings. After the issue of the sale-notification, and three days prior to the date fixed for the sale, one of the judgment-debtors applied to have the sale stayed, on the ground that an administration-suit was pending with respect to the property of his father, the mortgagor, and also asked that a receiver might be appointed and arrangements made for the purpose of paying off the mortgage-

The fund was not sufficient to satisfy all the decrees in full. A decree for rent was obtained against them. Prior to attachment, the taluqdars assigned their interest in eight annas of the hypothecated property to A., and made a maurasi lease of the remaining eight annas to him. The decree-holder then obtained an order for summary sale for the rent due for 1876-77. She then attempted to sell the property hypothecated to her. An objection by A. was allowed. A regular suit was then instituted by the decree-holder against A., and it was declared that she was, after selling the taluq, entitled to sell the hypothecated property. The decree-holder again attempted to execute her rent-decree by attaching and selling the hypothecated property, and an objection by A. was disallowed. Held, that no appeal lay from the order disallowing the objection, as A. could not be considered to be a "representative" of the taluqdars within the meaning of section 244, cl. 258. ——— N.-W. P. Rent Act, XVIII of 1873, s. 148—Landholder and tenant.—Suit in which right to receive rent is disputed.—Determination of such right.—Determination of proprietary right.—C. sued J. for the rent for certain land, alleging that he was the tenant of such land and J. was his sub-tenant. J. disputed C.'s right to receive rent for such land, alleging that he was not his sub-tenant, but S.'s, and had paid such rent to S. Under the provision of section 148 of Act XVIII of 1873, S. was made a party to the suit. The Collector decided on appeal in the suit that S. and not C. was the tenant of such land, and J. was her sub-tenant, and not C.'s, and had paid such rent to *S. This objection was one of the nature to be dealt with under section 278 and following sections of Act X of 1877. The Court executing the decree made an order against the decree-holder releasing the property from attachment. Held, that such order was not appealable, the fact that the objection was made by the judgment-debtor notwithstanding, and the decree-holder's proper remedy was to institute a suit under the provisions of section 283 of Act X of 1877. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court from such order as an order returning a plaint to be presented to the proper Court. Held, that such order could not be regarded as one to which art. (6) of section 588 of Act X of 1877 was applicable. That relates to orders returning plaints for amendment or to be presented to the proper Court passed by a Court of first instance, and not to an order by an Appellate Court upon an appeal to it from the decree of a Court of first instance on general grounds. held that the deed was invalid, but that the defendant was entitled to remain in possession of the property till her dower-debt was satisfied, and the Court passed a decree which merely dismissed the suit, without embodying the finding as to the deed. On appeal by the plaintiff to the District Judge, the defendant filed objections under section 561 of the Civil Procedure Code in regard to the first Court's decision that the deed of endowment was invalid. The Judge dismissed the plaintiff's appeal, affirming the finding as to dower, and, refusing to decide the question of the validity of the deed as being unnecessary for disposal of the claim, disallowed the defendant's objections. The defendant appealed to the High Court. Held by the Full Bench (OLDFIELD and MAHMOOD, JJ., dissenting), that if a decree is, upon the face of it, entirely in favour of a party to a suit, such decree being the thing which by law is made appealable, and nothing else, that party has no right of appeal therefrom. If, in the judgment of which such decree is the formal expression, findings have been recorded upon some issues against that party, and he desires to have formal effect given to them by the decree, so as to allow of his filing objections thereto under section 561 of the Civil Procedure Code or of appealing therefrom under section 540, he must take steps under section 206 to have the decree properly brought into conformity with the judgment, so that there may be matter on the face of it to show that something has been decided against him; but if he fails to take this course, the decree, though in general terms, will stand good as finally deciding the issues raised by the pleadings upon which the ultimate determination of the cause and the decree itself rested. The findings in a judgment upon matters which subsequently turn out to be immaterial to the grounds upon which a suit is finally disposed of, as to the plaintiff's right to any portion of the relief sought by him as declared by the decree, amount to no more than obiter dicta, and do not constitute a final decision of the kind contemplated by section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held also that, in the present case, the Judge was right in holding that the question as to the validity or otherwise of the deed of endowment was wholly immaterial. The judgment of STRAIGHT, J., in Lachman Singh v. Mohan, I. L. R., 4 All., 497, approved and followed. Per OLDFIELD, J., contra, that the decree, to agree with the judgment and fulfil the requirements of section 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, should contain the material points for determination arising out of the claim and material for the decision thereon; that if this has not been done, the defect is a good ground of appeal, notwithstanding that the decree, on its face, may be altogether in favour of the appellant, and notwithstanding that he may not have applied for amendment of the decree under section 206, or for review of judgment; and that, in the present case, the defect in the decree would afford a good ground of appeal. Per MAHMOOD, J., that inasmuch as the provisions of section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code relate as well to the trial of issues as to the trial of suits, and in the present case the validity or otherwise of the deed was a matter directly and substantially in issue between the parties, and was adjudicated upon, the finding of the first Court upon that issue was not a mere obiter dictum, but would be binding upon the defendant as res judicata, notwithstanding the fact that the suit against her was dismissed on the ground that she held possession of the property in lieu of dower; that whatever has the force of res judicata is necessarily appealable; that the word "from" as used in section 540 or section 584, and the expression "objection to the decree" in section 561, refer not only to matters existing upon the face of the decree, but also to those which should have existed but do not exist there; and that the defendant in the present case was aggrieved or injured by the omission in the decree of the first Court and was therefore entitled to file objections to it, and, for the same reason, to appeal to the High Court from the decree of the lower Appellate Court. Also per MAHMOOD, J., that it was doubtful whether the reliefs contemplated by sections 206 and 623 were open to the defendant; but that, even conceding that she ought to have sought her remedy under either of those sections, her neglect to do so did not make her incapable of obtaining the same result by the exercise of her right of appeal. *Amusuyabai v. On appeal the Appellate Court remanded the case for the purpose of a local investigation being held at the cost, in the first instance, of the plaintiff. The lower Court thereupon made an order that the plaintiff should deposit the costs of the local investigation, and on default being made by the plaintiff it dismissed the suit. The order of remand was found to be invalid as made without jurisdiction. Held, that all proceedings taken by the Court of first instance, after the remand, and pending the hearing of the appeal against the remand order, were null and void, inasmuch as the jurisdiction of that Court to hear the case upon remand depended upon the validity of the remand order. An appeal, therefore, lay from the order of remand, notwithstanding the Court of first instance had subsequently made what purported to be a final decree in the case. The claim was for ₹530-7-3, as money had and received by the defendant to the plaintiff's use. The Subordinate Judge did not deal with the case under his Small Cause Court jurisdiction, but tried it as an ordinary suit, and gave the plaintiff a decree for ₹441-0-7. On appeal, the District Judge was of opinion that the claim had been recklessly overvalued, and he held, therefore, that the suit was one cognizable by a Small Cause Court, and that the appeal was barred. Held, reversing the decision of the lower Appellate Court, that as the claim or "demand" exceeded ₹500—the pecuniary limit of the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes under section 5 of Act XI of 1865—and as the case was not "tried under" the Act, section 21 gave no finality to the decree of the Subordinate Judge, which was, therefore, appealable. The defendants set up as a defence that the fruit on such tree had not been removed, and that such tree belonged to them. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit, on the ground that the fruit on such tree had not been removed, but found incidentally that such tree belonged to the plaintiff. The plaintiff appealed from the decree of the Court of first instance; and the defendants objected to the decree, contending that such tree belonged to them. Held that, inasmuch as the Court of first instance did not, in deciding that such tree belonged to the plaintiff, decide a question substantially in issue, it did not decide in this matter "against the defendants," within the meaning of section 561 of the Civil Procedure Code, and, as the decree was limited to dismissing the suit, the defendants as respondents were not qualified to take an objection which they could not have taken by way of appeal, and therefore the Appellate Court was not warranted by law in entertaining the objection taken by the defendants. 417. ——— Objections on appeal as to costs.—Procedure.—Notice of objections.—The Court of first instance found for the defendants on the merits, and passed a decree in their favour without costs. The defendants appealed against that part of the decree which disallowed them their costs. The plaintiff filed a notice of objections to the decree on the merits as required by section 561 o the Code of Civil Procedure (XIV of 1882). The lower Court of Appeal varied the decree by allowing the defendants their costs of suit, and held that the plaintiff was not entitled to file any objections. Held, that the Court of Appeal was in error in holding that the plaintiff's objections could not be entertained. Section 561 of the Code gives the respondent the power of taking any objection to the decree at the hearing of an appeal which he could have taken by way of appeal, provided he has filed a notice of his objections not less than seven days before the date fixed for the hearing of the appeal; and this power is independent of whether an appeal lies on a mere question of costs. Court should not go beyond the subject-matter of the appeal applies to an objection, called a cross-appeal, under section 348, which enables the respondent to take any objection to the decision of the lower Court which he might have taken if he had preferred a separate appeal. The joint effect of this section and of Act VII of 1870, section 16, is to place the respondent in the position of a cross-appellant in so far that he must, before the hearing, specify his matter of objection, and must pay into Court the Court fee attaching thereto. An Appellate Court was held to have acted without authority, and to have contravened the Court Fees Act, in having voluntarily suggested what it thought to be an error of the Court below, and allowed the respondent to take it as an objection giving effect to the objection subject to the payment of the Court fee stamp. (a) APPEALABLE ORDERS.

1. ——— Order of High Court dismissing Munsif.—Bengal Reg. V of 1831, s. 26, cl. 2.—An order of the High Court at Calcutta under section 26, clause 2 of Bengal Regulation V of 1831, dismissing a Munsif for corruption in the exercise of his functions as Judge, is final, and there is no jurisdiction in the Judicial Committee to admit a special appeal therefrom. 2. ——— Decision as to admissibility of special appeal.—Act III of 1843.—By Act III of 1843, the decision of a single Judge of the Sudder Court of Bombay as to the admissibility of a special appeal was final so far as the Sudder Court was concerned; but the Act did not extend to take away the right of appeal to the Privy Council. 3. ——— Award under Act XVIII of 1848.—Administration of private estate of Nawab of Surat.—Statutes 7 & 8 Vict., c. 69; 3 and 4 Will. IV, c. 41.—An Act of the Legislature of India—XVIII of 1848—empowered the Governor in Council of Bombay to administer the private estate of the late Nawab of Surat, and it was by section 2 enacted "that no Act of the said Governor of Bombay in Council in respect of the administration to, and distribution of, such property, from the date of the death of the said Nawab, should be liable to be questioned in any Court of law or equity." No provision was made for an appeal from the Governor's decision. In pursuance of the power conferred by this Act, the Governor

On an application by a claimant dissatisfied with the award to the Judicial Committee, for leave to appeal from the Governor in Council's confirmation of the award,—Held, that the award was not such a judicial act as to come within the operation of section 3 of the statute 3 and 4 Will. IV, c. 41, or the 7 and 8 Vict., c. 69, and could not be entertained by the Judicial Committee without a special reference to them by the Crown under section 4 of the statute 3 and 4 Will. IV, c. 41. 6. ——— Order confirming sale in execution.—Order made on appeal.—Letters Patent, cl. 39.—24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, s. 15.—Certain property having been sold in execution of a decree, the judgment-debtor applied to have the sale set aside. This application was rejected; but a review of the order rejecting it was subsequently granted, and the sale set aside; and an application by the auction-purchaser for the cancelment of the order setting aside the sale was refused. Thereupon the purchaser applied by petition to the High Court, praying that the order made on review might be reversed. In his petition he submitted that "the sale ought to have been confirmed" when the application of the judgment-debtor to have it set aside was first rejected; but the petition did not contain a formal prayer for confirmation of the sale. A rule, however, was granted, calling on the judgment-debtor to show cause why the order reversing the sale should not be set aside and the sale confirmed, which rule, after argument, was made absolute. The judgment-debtor having obtained leave to appeal to the Privy Council from the order making the rule absolute, the purchaser objected that such order was not appealable under cl. 39 of the Letters Patent, 1865, on the ground that it was not an order "made on appeal." Held, that as the purchaser had obtained a rule

15. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 595 (a).—"Final decree."—Certain persons interested in an award applied under section 525 of the Civil Procedure Code to have it filed in Court. The Court made an order under section 526 "that the claim of the plaintiffs be decreed." The defendants appealed to the High Court from this "decree." The High Court held that the appeal would not lie, and suggested to the plaintiffs to apply to the lower Court to give judgment according to the award, and a decree to follow it. Thereupon the plaintiffs made an application to the lower Court of the nature suggested, but styled it one for review of judgment. The lower Court granted the so-called review of judgment. The defendants appealed from the order of the lower Court, contending that the "review of judgment" had been improperly granted. On the 23rd June 1880 the High Court held that the order of the lower Court was not appealable, not being one passed on review of judgment, but on an application to give judgment and decree in accordance with an award which had been filed in Court. The defendants applied for leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council from the order of the High Court of the 23rd June 1880. Held, that such order was not a "final decree" within the meaning of section 595 (a) of the Civil Procedure Code, and therefore it was not appealable to Her Majesty in Council. The mistake having been discovered, such notification was, so far as he was concerned, cancelled. He then petitioned the High Court in the matter, and was informed by it that his name must be excluded from such notification, as he had not qualified by obtaining the requisite number of marks. The candidate having applied for leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council,—Held, that Chapter XLV of the Civil Procedure Code had no application, and the matter was not one in which the High Court was concerned to grant or refuse leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council. Section 22 of 24 and 25 Vict., c. 67, must be read with sections 9 and 11 of 24 and 25 Vict., c. 104. By the express words of section 9 all previously existing powers were reserved to the High Court, provided the Letters Patent did not interfere with them, and as to these powers the Governor General in Council is expressly empowered to legislate. Even if, therefore, the power to admit an appeal to the Privy Council were conferred by the Letters Patent under the authority of 24 and 25 Vict., c. 104, it was, not being a new power, subject to the legislative control of the Governor General in Council. 25. ——— Conflicting claims to waters of flowing stream.—Court Fees Act, 1870, s. 7.—In ascertaining whether or not there ought to be an appeal to the Privy Council, the High Court has only to look at the value of the question at issue in the litigation. IV, in c. 51, all appeals from the decrees of Vice-Admiralty Courts are to be asserted within fifteen days after the date of the decree. Held, that the words "after the date of the decree" mean after the date when the decree is pronounced by the Admiralty or Vice-Admiralty Court, as the case may be; not the date when the decree is reduced to writing and signed. On the 23rd July 1880, the High Court in its Appellate Jurisdiction, modifying a decree of the High Court as a Court of Vice-Admiralty in a cause of damage by collision, referred it to the Registrar to assess the damages that had been incurred in reference to one of the ships, both of which were held to be in fault. The parties went, without protest, before the Registrar for that purpose, the impugnants also having taken out process to compel the appearance of the promovents before him, and the damages were assessed with the consent of both parties at a certain amount. On the 2nd September 1880, a notice of appeal was given on behalf of the impugnants, and was recorded as asserted pursuant to rule 35 above referred to. Held, that the appeal was not within time, more than fifteen days having elapsed after the decree before the appeal was asserted. According to the law laid down in the Vice-Admiralty Courts, the proceedings taken before the Registrar were themselves sufficient also to prevent an appeal as of right. 1. GENERAL DUTY OF APPELLATE COURTS.

1. ——— High Court, Practice of.—Appeal on questions of fact.—Credibility of witnesses.—The High Court, sitting in appeal on questions of fact, was guided by the same rules as those of the Privy Council when they sat upon motions for a rule for new trials from the old Supreme Court. The High Court, sitting in appeal, will not disturb a judgment upon a question as to the credibility of witnesses, unless it be manifestly clear, from the probabilities attached to certain circumstances in the case, that the Court was wrong in the conclusion drawn from such evidence. The High Court, sitting in appeal, will look upon the decree of a Judge as to facts in the same light as the verdict of a jury; and though some of the reasons given for the conclusion arrived at be erroneous, the High Court in appeal will not say that the decree is against the weight of evidence, if sufficient reason for such decree still remain. Heeralall Chuckerbutty v. Mohesh Chunder Ghosaul . . . 1 Hyde, 105

2. ——— Privy Council, Practice of.—Appeal on questions of fact.—The rule of the Privy Council not to disturb a judgment of a Court in India upon a question of fact, unless it is clear from the probabilities of the case that the judgment is wrong, however necessary as regards a Court of Appeal far removed from India, would hardly be extended as one equally necessary and applicable with the same strictness to a Court of Appeal in India. Saroda Soondery v. Tincowry Nundy, [1 Hyde, 223

3. ——— Question of fact, Ground for disturbing finding on.—Held, on examination of the evidence, that the lower Appellate Court ought not to have disturbed the distinct finding of the lower Court, as it had, upon what appeared to be mere conjecture. Lal Mahomed Bipari v. Shoila Bewa . . . 11 C. L. R., 104

4. ——— Jurisdiction where appeal is barred.—When an appeal is barred by law, an Appellate Court cannot interfore in any matter legitimately arising out of the case, unless there is want of jurisdiction. Kurum Chand Kolebah v. Huree Mohun Ghose . . . 2 W. R., Mis., 45

5. ——— Presumption of correctness of judgment appealed from.—Duty of Judge.—A Judge of appeal is not in the position of an arbitrator who has to look at the evidence on both sides and determine which is preferable. He has to deal with the decision of a properly constituted Court, which, if not shown to be erroneous, ought to be affirmed. Shetabdee Biswas v. Molamdee Mundul . . . . 25 W. R., 30

6. ——— Credibility of witnesses.—In cases turning on the credibility of witnesses, the Appellate Court gives great weight to the decision of the Courts below. Womesh Chunder Roy v. Deendyal Poramanick . . . 2 Hay, 12

7. ——— Where credit has been given to witnesses by the Court of first instance before which they have been examined, the Appellate Court is not at liberty to say that it disbelieves them without stating reasons. Hoymo Dassee v. Sreekissen Nundy . . . . 14 W. R., 58

8. ——— Dealing with documentary evidence.—Where a Munsif pronounces an opinion as to the authenticity of certain documents, the lower Appellate Court must assume that he did his duty and looked into each and every one of them before pronouncing such opinion. On a question of simple credit to be given to a witness, an Appellate Court, having before it merely written depositions, is not authorized to set aside the opinion of the Court of first instance which heard the witness and recorded that his demeanour was not satisfactory. Gopee Nath Mookerjee v. Boddhumunt Mal [25 W. R., 26

See Nobin Chunder Pooshalee v. Rungo Chunder Chatterjee. [25 W. R., 363

9. ——— Method of dealing with questions of fact in appeal.—In dealing with questions of fact which turn entirely upon evidence given on the trial, the High Court ought not merely to consider whether the lower Court has come to the same conclusion as that to which it should have come if it had originally heard the witnesses, but, before reversing the decision, it ought to be satisfied that the Court was clearly wrong. Ootum v. Mullick Gholam Hossein . . . 2 Hay, 359

10. ——— Point taken in appeal but not argued by pleader.—Where a point is taken on appeal, the Appellate Court should consider and decide it, although the vakil may omit to argue it. Dada valad Valli v. Bavasha valad Kasam [6 Bom., A. C., 9

2. EXERCISE OF POWERS IN VARIOUS CASES.

(a) GENERAL CASES.

12. ——— Discretion, Exercise of.—Discretion capriciously exercised.—Error of law.—The discretion vested in a Court of Justice must be exercised in a sound and reasonable manner, and a capricious and unreasonable exercise of discretion on the part of a Court of first instance is an error in law which it is the duty of an Appellate Court to correct. PENDSE v. MALSE . . . 3 Bom., A. C., 94

13. ——— Appellate Court's power to interfere with exercise of discretion.—When an appeal against an order based on facts is given from a subordinate to a superior Court, the discretion vested in the former is absorbed in the latter, and it is the duty of the superior Court to weigh the facts which form the basis upon which the subordinate Court proceeds and arrive at its own independent conclusion: and this is so notwithstanding that the subordinate Court exercised its discretion after a proper enquiry and due consideration of the facts put before it, and not capriciously or with prejudice. KIRANI AHMEDULA v. SUBABHAT [I. L. R., 8 Bom., 28

16. ——— Discretion of Judge.—Refusal to admit appeal.—Limitation.—Where the law leaves a matter within the discretion of a Court, and the Court, after proper enquiry and due consideration, has exercised the discretion in a sound and reasonable manner, the High Court will not interfere with the conclusion arrived at, even though it would itself have arrived at a different conclusion. Consequently, where a District Judge, after due enquiry, refused to admit an appeal presented after the time prescribed by the Statuate of Limitations, the High Court would not interfere with his order. RANCHODJI v. LÁLLU [I. L. R., 6 Bom., 304

17. ———Question of limitation.—Appeal.—B. sued M. and T. for money due on a bond, and on the 27th April 1877 obtained a decree against T.; the suit against M. being dismissed. T. applied for a review of judgment, and B. also made a similar application. On the 25th May 1877 T.'s application was granted, and on the 16th July 1877, B.'s was rejected. On the 29th June, 1878, the Court re-heard the suit against T. and dismissed it. B. appealed, making T. and M. respondents, and impugning in his memorandum of appeal the decree of the 27th April 1877, as well as that of the 29th June 1878. The Appellate Court, assuming that the appeal was one from the decree of the 27th April 1877, preferred beyond time, admitted it after time, and after hearing the case on its merits gave a decree against M. and dismissed the suit as regards T. Held, that the Appellate Court erred in assuming that the appeal was from the decree of the 27th April 1877, and that it was at liberty to admit it beyond time, the appeal being from the decree of the 29th June 1878, that decree being the one which had brought B. before that Court as an appellant; and that the Appellate Court was not competent, on an appeal from the decree of the 29th June 1878, to reconsider the merits of the case against M., the appeal from the decree of the 27th April 1877 being barred by limitation, and that decree and the decree of the 29th June 1878 being separate and distinct, and not appealable in one memorandum of appeal from the latter decree. Plaintiff, who had purchased one B.'s rights and interests in a 4-annas share of the property, intervened; but his intervention having been rejected in the summary department, he sued to set aside the summary order, and to establish his vendor's right in the property. The vendor having admitted the sale to the plaintiff, the first Court thought it unnecessary to examine the witnesses to, and the writer of, the deed of sale, and, finding the plaintiff in possession, decreed the suit. This decision was reversed on appeal. Held, that the lower Appellate Court did wrong in presuming collusion between B. and his vendee (the plaintiff), and ought not to have rejected the deed without examining the writer and witnesses; and that it should have decided whether plaintiff was in possession at any time under the deed of sale. The powers conferred by sections 54 (a) and (c) and 55, read with section 582 of the Civil Procedure Code, or by section 12 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), read with clause (ii) of section 10, are intended to be exercised before the disposal of the case, and not after it has been decided finally so far as the Court is concerned. The powers conferred by section 28 of the Court Fees Act cannot be exercised by an order passed after the decision of the case to which the question of the payment of Court fees relates, and, even assuming that they can be so exercised, such an order, though it may be subject to such rules as to appeal or revision as the law may provide, cannot be given effect to by making insertions in an antecedent decree. Per OLDFIELD, J.—That the Court had power to make the order it did, inasmuch as the collection of Court fees was no part of a Judge's functions in the trial of a suit which could be said to have ceased with its determination; and the provisions of the Court Fees Act fixed no time within which the presiding Judge could exercise his power of ordering documents to be stamped, and seemed, on the other hand, to contemplate the exercise of that power at any time subsequent to the receipt, filing, or use of a document, and to make the validity of the document and the proceedings relative thereto dependent on the document being properly stamped. such improper exercise of discretion under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act has no higher footing than that of an error, defect, or irregularity, not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court, within the meaning of section 578 of the Civil Procedure Code. The plaintiff obtained a decree in a partition suit in the Subordinate Judge's Court for his share in certain joint family property in the possession of the defendants (his co-parceners). The decree was affirmed on appeal. The defendants filed a second appeal in the High Court, but before it was decided one of the defendants died. The plaintiff at the hearing of the second appeal claimed a larger share in the family property than he had been awarded by the decree of the Courts below. Held, that he (plaintiff) was entitled to a share in that of the co-parcener who died pendente lite, and that the decree appealed from ought to be varied accordingly. This was modified on appeal by the declaration that "the defendants are putnidars of the same mouzahs." Held, that it was unnecessary on this appeal to consider whether the Appellate Court was right in its conclusion that the defendants were putnidars; because, upon the case which had been set up for the defendants, and upon the issues framed and tried in the lower Court, the Appellate Court could not properly make such a declaration: the defendants could not be in a better position than they would have been in had they claimed to be putnidars, in which case an issue as to that title would have been framed and tried. 203. ——— Objection that document is improperly stamped.—The plaintiff appealed to the Judge against a dismissal of his suit, who reversed the decision of the Court below, and gave the plaintiff a decree. The defendant thereupon appealed to the High Court, on the ground that a document had been admitted in evidence in support of the plaintiff's case which did not bear a proper stamp. Held that the defendant, having omitted to take the objection before the Judge, could not appeal on this ground. RAMBRUM LALL v. ABLUCKH SINGH . . . Marsh., 267: 2 Hay, 148

204. ——— Refusal to examine witnesses.—A Court of first instance, being satisfied that plaintiff's case could not be established, refused to examine defendant's witnesses. The lower Appellate Court, differing from the Munsif, gave plaintiff a decree. Held that, although the Munsif had committed a great irregularity, still as that point was not raised in the lower Appellate Court it could not be taken in special appeal. 223. ——— Minority.—Right of member of family to alienate.—A plaintiff obtained a decree to set aside an alienation of ancestral property effected by his father during his minority. Defendant objected in special appeal, first, that the suit was barred by lapse of time since plaintiff attained his majority; and secondly, that, under the Mitakshara law, the father had a right to alienate a share of the property. Held, that as the first of these objections was entirely a matter of fact, and as the second, though essentially a matter of law, went to the substance of the plaintiff's claim, they should have been urged in the lower Courts, and could not be admitted for the first time in special appeal. BENODE PUTNAIK v. DOYANIDHEE BULLIOR SINGH [9 W. R., 493

224. ——— Settlement.—In the first Court an issue was raised whether or not the hearing of this suit was barred by the law of limitation. One of the grounds of appeal to the Judge was, that the Principal Sudder Ameen ought to have held the suit barred as regards the diaras under the special limitation of three years from the date of the Collector's settlement. The Judge did not notice this ground in his judgment. The same ground of appeal was repeated in the special appeal to the High Court, but that Court refused to entertain it, for the reason that it did not appear to have been raised in argument before the Judge or in the first Court. On appeal the question of limitation was not raised, but on the merits the Judge also found against A. On special appeal by A., B. took an objection under section 348 of Act VIII of 1859 that A.'s suit was barred. Held, that B. could not take the objection at that stage. The present defendant, in the course of that suit, presented a petition to the Court, in which he stated that he was the owner of the land on which the crops attached had been raised. The plaintiff brought the present suit for a declaration of his title and confirmation of possession, alleging that the defendant's statement affected his (plaintiff's) title by throwing a cloud over it. On special appeal it was objected for the first time that the plaint disclosed no cause of action, and the objection was admitted and prevailed. JAN ALI v. KHONKAR ABDUR KUHMA . 6 B. L. The plaint in the suit was not amended, and the lower Appellate Court eventually gave the plaintiff a declaratory decree. Held, on second appeal by the defendant, who objected that a suit merely for a declaratory decree could not be maintained, that such objection ought not to be allowed under the circumstances. With regard to R., it was proved that he was present when B. pointed out the place where some of the property was dug up, but he did not appear to have said anything or given any directions about it. Held, with reference to A., B., and M., that it could not be said that their recent possession of part of the stolen property, so soon after it had been stolen, was not such corroboration of the approver's evidence of their participation in the crime as entitled the Court to act upon his story in regard to those particular persons. Held that, inasmuch as there was no sufficient material to warrant the inference of guilty knowledge on R.'s part, and with regard to N., no property was found with him or produced through his instrumentality, both R. and N. ought to have been acquitted. The Sessions Judge considered that the Deputy Magistrate was bound under section 349, Code of Criminal Procedure, to commit on the original charge of murder, and not on that of giving false evidence, and he recommended that the order of commitment should be quashed and the Deputy Magistrate directed to commit on the charge of murder. (a) ACT VI OF 1857.

1. ——— Act VI of 1857.—Land acquisition.—Appointment of third arbitrator.—Non-attendance of umpire.—Waiver.—Where one of two arbitrators, appointed under section 10 of Act VI of 1857, by letter and also verbally authorized his co-arbitrator to appoint a certain person as third arbitrator, and the co-arbitrator wrote to the proposed third arbitrator informing him that he had been so appointed, Semble,—That there was a good appointment "by writing" of the third arbitrator within the meaning of section 12 of Act VI of 1857. Where a third arbitrator appointed under section 12 of Act VI of 1857, considering that his services were required merely as an umpire, though he had due notice of the first meeting, neglected to attend that or any subsequent meetings of the arbitrators and took no part in the making of the award,—It was held that such non-attendance of the third arbitrator did not render the award a nullity, but was only a ground for setting it aside on the ground of irregularity. Where an officer, appointed under Act VI of 1857 to conduct arbitration proceedings on behalf of Government, attended the first two meetings of the arbitrators and did not object to two of the arbitrators proceeding with the reference in the absence of the third arbitrator, and did not attend the subsequent meetings of the arbitrators,—It was held that the Government had thereby waived their right to insist on the non-attendance of the third arbitrator as a ground for setting aside the award. 3. ——— s. 32.—Waiver of irregularity.—Well in mill compound.—Manufactory.—By a Government notification of the 3rd of June 1863, published in the Gazette, it was declared, under the provisions of Act VI of 1857, that a certain strip of land passing by the mill of the defendants was required for a public purpose,—the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway,—a plan of which land was to be seen in the Collector's office. On the 4th of November following, the secretary of the defendants' company received a notice signed by the Collector, requiring the owner of the mill to call at the Collector's office to signify his acceptance or otherwise of the compensation for the land required. The secretary went to the Collector's office, and there saw a plan, from which it appeared that an adjoining well from which the engine of the mill was supplied with water was intended to be taken, but no compensation for the well or land required was then agreed upon. On the 28th November a notice signed by the Collector was served on the defendants, stating that he had appointed an arbitrator on behalf of Government, and requiring the defendants to appoint an arbitrator also; the defendants in reply stated that they had already appointed an arbitrator. Held, that the defendants had, by appointing their arbitrator to determine the compensation for the land required, waived any irregularity in the previous proceedings, and precluded themselves from claiming to have the whole manufactory taken under section 32, Act VI of 1857, though no proceedings were taken in the arbitration for nearly twelve months subsequently, and the defendants had shortly before such proceedings made such a claim. The Court made an order expressed to be by consent of the parties concerned, and in exercise of the Court's discretionary power under section 16 of Act XX of 1863, referring the matters in difference to three arbitrators for final determination, the said arbitrators "to make their award in writing and submit the same" within a certain period. Each arbitrator delivered a separate award in writing, two arbitrators finding for the plaintiff. The Civil Judge made a decree in accordance with the award of the majority of the arbitrators. The first defendant appealed on the grounds, (1) that he had not consented to the arbitration, and (2) that there being no provision in the order of reference to the effect that the finding of a majority of the arbitrators should prevail, there was no valid award. Held that, in this case, the order of the Judge was valid without the assent of the persons to be bound; that he might, when he made the order, have inserted as a provision that the decision of the majority should

Some steps were taken in the reference, but the arbitrators failed to make their award within the time limited, and meanwhile the umpire died. After negotiations for appointment of a fresh arbitrator and enlargement of the time had failed, the plaintiff moved that "the order of the 9th April 1877" might be recalled, and that the matters in dispute might be referred to the arbitration of such person or persons as the Court might be pleased to admit, or be tried and determined by the Court. The defendant applied to the High Court, under its extraordinary jurisdiction, praying that the record of the case might be sent for, and the order of the Subordinate Judge set aside. Held, that the arbitrators had no implied power to deal with the question of costs, and that on the defendant's objection the Subordinate Judge should have refused to file the award. 47. ——— Remission to arbitrators after decision on special appeal.—A case having been referred to arbitration without provision being made for a difference of opinion, and the arbitrators having given in differing awards, the Court of first instance tried the case anew, and dismissed the suit. This decision was confirmed on appeal. In special appeal the plaintiff asked that the case might be sent back to the arbitrators with a provision for difference of opinion, and that they might submit their award a second time. Held, that it was too late at this stage to allow such a course. 48. ——— Refusal of arbitrator to reconsider award.—The plaintiff in this suit sued the defendants to recover certain moneys presented to him on his marriage, which he alleged the defendants had received and appropriated to their own use. The defendants denied that they had received such moneys, but admitted that such moneys had been credited by the plaintiff's father to the firm in which they, the plaintiff, and the plaintiff's father, were jointly interested, against a larger amount of moneys belonging to the firm which had been expended on the plaintiff's marriage. The parties agreed to refer the matter in dispute between them to arbitration, and to abide by the decision of the arbitrator. The arbitrator decided that the plaintiff could not recover the money he sued for, and which had been credited to the firm of which he was a partner, as a larger sum had been expended on his marriage out of the funds of the firm. The plaintiff obtained the opinions of certain pandits to the effect that, under Hindu law, gifts on marriage are regarded as separate acquisitions, and prayed that the Munsif would remit the award with these opinions to the arbitrator. The Munsif remitted the award with the opinions, requesting the arbitrator to consider them, and to return his opinion in writing within a certain period. The arbitrator having refused to act further, the Munsif proceeded to determine the suit, and gave the plaintiff a decree, on the ground that, in a joint Hindu family, presents received on marriage do not fall into the common fund. Held (PEARSON, J., dissenting) that, there being no illegality apparent on the face of the award, the Munsif was not justified in remitting the award, or in setting the award aside and proceeding to determine the suit himself, but that he should have passed judgment in accordance with the award. 50. ———— Omission of arbitrator to carry out terms of reference.—Suit for partition and to take accounts.—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 2, 520, 522, 523.—Filing agreement to refer to arbitration in Court.—"Decree."—The sharers of a joint undivided estate agreed in writing that such estate should be partitioned, and the accounts thereof settled by arbitration, and named one of such sharers as arbitrator, and agreed that he should settle all the accounts, show the surplus at each sharer's credit, and prepare lots, after partition of the lands and houses comprehended in such estate, and have them drawn within one year from the completion of the partition. Subsequently one of such sharers applied, under section 523 of Act X of 1877, to have such agreement filed in Court. The other sharers not objecting to this course, such agreement was filed accordingly, and the case was referred to such arbitrator. The arbitrator made an award whereby he partitioned such estate into lots, assigning some only of such lots by name, and wherein he stated that he had not been able to settle the accounts owing to the default of the parties; and that, considering that the partition should take effect without any delay, he did not ask for further time. He further stated that "all the parties state that they will adjust the accounts after renewing the agreement," and he requested that the unassigned lots might be drawn in Court. The Court made an order confirming the award, and, it being objected that the settlement of the accounts should not be postponed, but that they should be settled as agreed, directed that the arbitrator should settle the accounts, and gave him a year's time for that purpose; and, some of the parties not being willing to draw the unassigned lots, directed the distribution of such lots "in reference to the age and number" of the sharers. Held, that such order was a "decree" within the meaning of sections 2 and 522 of Act X of 1877: that the arbitrator should himself have drawn such lots, or he should have made the parties draw them; but, inasmuch as it would not have strained the agreement to have had such lots drawn in Court, and no objection had been taken to the arbitrator not having himself drawn them, it was not incumbent on the Court to have remitted the award in order that the arbitrator might have drawn them: that the Court, however, should not have distributed such lots in the manner it had done, but should have drawn a lot for each person; and in acting as it had done, it had acted contrary to the award, and for that reason its decree could not be maintained: and that, in confirming the award before the accounts had been settled and an award made in respect thereof, the Court had acted erroneously, inasmuch as the award had left undetermined a very important matter, viz., the settlement of the accounts; and the Court should, under section 520 of Act X of 1877, have remitted the award for the reconsideration of the arbitrator; and, as it had the power to remit it upon such terms as it thought fit, the Court could have allowed one year, if necessary, for the settlement of the accounts; and on this account, and also because the Court had made an order postponing the settlement of the accounts, and thereby made an order contrary to, and in excess of, the award, its decree must be reversed. 58. ——— Appointment of new arbitrator, Power of.—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), secs. 506, 508, 510, 521.—On 19th June 1884, an application for an order of reference was made, under section 506 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) by both parties to a suit. It was signed by both defendants and by the plaintiffs' pleader. As the plaintiffs' pleader had not been "specially authorized in writing" to join in the application, the Court postponed making any order on the application till the 23rd idem. On that day the first defendant did not attend the Court, but the plaintiffs' pleader produced the requisite authority, and the Court made an order referring the suit to the decision of the arbitrator nominated in the application of the 19th. On 27th June the first defendant made an application to the Court to revoke the authority of the arbitrator and appoint a new arbitrator in his place, on the ground that, after signing the application of the 19th, he had become aware of certain circumstances connected with the arbitrator which showed that he was not worthy of the confidence reposed in him. No final order was made upon this application till after the submission of the award, when it was rejected on the ground that the charges of misconduct and partiality imputed to the arbitrator were not made out. Held, first, that the first defendant not having objected to the appointment of the arbitrator on or before the 23rd June 1884, when the order of reference was made, must be taken to have tacitly acquiesced in the course adopted by the Court, and that such acquiescence amounted to a fresh submission. Ardesar Hormosji Wadia v. Secretary of State for India, 9 Bom., 177; and Sreenath Ghose v. Raj Chunder Paul, 8 W. R., 171, followed. The objections raised by the first defendant could only be considered after the submission of the award, and then only to the extent permitted by section 521 of the Code of Civil Procedure (XIV of 1882). When once a matter is referred to arbitration it is not competent to the Court, under the second paragraph of section 508 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), to "deal with" the matter in difference between the parties, except as provided in Chapter XXXVII of the Code. There is no section of that chapter which authorizes the Court to revoke the authority conferred on an arbitrator and to appoint a new one, except in cases falling strictly within the purview of section 510 of the Code, where "the scope and object of the reference cannot be executed." It is only in those cases, apparently, that the authority conferred on arbitrators can be revoked "for good cause," the cause being such as is contemplated in that section, as where "an arbitrator refuses, or neglects or becomes incapable to act, or leaves British India under circumstances showing that he will probably not return to India at an early date." The enactment of the second paragraph of section 508 of the Code of 1882, which does not occur in the corresponding section (315) of Act VIII of 1859, has the effect of rigidly restricting the Courts to the exact procedure laid down when dealing with cases in which the appointment of a new arbitrator becomes necessary. Before J. was examined the defendants objected to the case being decided in accordance with J.'s evidence, but the Court disallowed the objection, and having taken J.'s statement on oath decided the case in accordance therewith. Held by STUART, *C. The plaintiff alleged that the allowance, as fixed, was payable in perpetuity, and was paid till 1864-65, when it was stopped, and prayed for a decree declaring him entitled to it and arrears for eleven years. Held, that effect could not be given to the award as a decree, as no Court would pass a decree fixing a grant of maintenance in perpetuity; that an allowance fixed by a decree as maintenance was ordinarily liable to be varied, on the party ordered to pay it showing circumstances rendering it equitable to make the variation; and that there being no reason to suppose that the arbitrators had any idea of fixing the allowance for a longer period than the life-time of the parties, and all those parties being dead, no effect could any longer be given to the award. It was held that, assuming that the reference permitted the arbitrators nominated to authorize either of the parties to collect the debts attached, inasmuch as the agreement was unaccompanied by any stipulation that a less number than the whole of the arbitrators could determine whether such permission should be given, the act of the three arbitrators which led to the issue of the order could not be supported, and that the last portion of that order was ultra vires and must be declared void. with other matters, to the arbitration of five persons, the effect being to withdraw the first submission and substitute the new agreement. Before these arbitrators arrived at a final conclusion, the parties by a solenamah compromised the whole of the subjects of dispute, and afterwards an award was drawn up in the terms of the solenamah and signed by two of the arbitrators and the head arbitrator. When the award was brought before the Subordinate Judge, he considered it had been made ultra vires in respect of those matters which were not involved in the suits originally referred, and accordingly made a decree only in those suits corresponding with the terms of the award. Some of the defendants applied to the Subordinate Judge to have the effect of a decree given to that portion of the award which was left outstanding by the first decision. This application was decreed and the remainder of the award enforced. An appeal to the Judge was dismissed with costs. Held, that the award was illegal because it was not signed by all the arbitrators, and there had been no agreement to abide by the decision of the majority, or that the voice of the umpire should prevail. Held, however, that as the parties concerned did not take steps to set the Subordinate Judge right, the High Court could not interfere, but that the effect of the decision was to dispose of the award altogether, and not to divide it into two parts, one of which might form the foundation of a future judgment. Held, that the application to give effect to the unenforced portion of the award ought to have been dismissed. During the investigation of these matters by the arbitrators the plaintiff offered to be bound by the oath of the defendant administered on the Koran. The defendant agreed to take such oath, and such was accordingly administered to him by the arbitrators, and his evidence taken, and an award made based on the evidence so taken. On special appeal to the High Court by the plaintiff, he objected for the first time, the objection not having been taken in his memorandum of special appeal, that the arbitrators were not legally competent to administer such oath, and the evidence so taken could not form a valid basis of an award, and the award was therefore void. Held per PEARSON, J., SPANKIE, J., dissenting, with reference to the legal competency of the arbitrators to administer the oath, that the objection was good, and that the arbitrators had no power to administer the oath. Per PEARSON, J., that the statement of the defendant made on an oath illegally administered could not form a valid basis of an award, and the award was void and should be set aside. Per SPANKIE, J., that the plaintiff having offered to be bound by the oath, and the defendant having agreed to take it, the plaintiff was bound by the evidence given on such oath; and that as the arbitrators had by law and consent of parties authority to receive the evidence of the defendant, the substitution by them of an oath on the Koran for an affirmation did not, under the provisions of section 13, Act X of 1873, invalidate such evidence, and consequently render the award based on such evidence void. the arbitrators all agreed, and informed the parties, that the decisions so arrived at constituted the final award, and gave directions for embodying those decisions in the shape of a formal document, which was drawn up on a subsequent day, but was signed by four only out of the seven arbitrators. The remaining arbitrators not being asked to sign it, they never did sign it. Held, that the actual award was an oral award made by all the arbitrators on the last day of their joint sitting, and the drawing up of the formal award was a purely ministerial act to give effect to the previously completed judicial act. The omission to take the signatures of the minority of the arbitrators to the document which formed the record of the award was not fatal to the award. DANDEKAR v. DANDEKARS . . . I. L. The only objections which the Court can enquire into under sections 525 and 526 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) are those which are specified in sections 520 and 521, and these relate to cases in which the reference and the award are accepted facts; but where the objection denies the factum of the particular award sought to be filed, and the objection does not seem to be frivolous, but one giving rise to enquiry into difficult questions of law and fact, it is not competent for the Court to deal with that objection under sections 525 and 526. In such a case the Court should leave the applicant to a regular suit on the award as the basis of his cause of action, wherein the party urging the objection will have the advantage of being a defendant rather than a plaintiff, and of having an appeal open

On appeal the Subordinate Judge decided that the award was valid. On second appeal,—Held that, although where an application to file an award under section 525 and objection is made upon any of the grounds mentioned in section 520 or 521, the proper course for the Court is to dismiss the application, and leave the applicant to bring a regular suit to enforce the award; yet both parties having consented to the matter being tried upon the application as if in a regular suit, it could not, on second appeal, be objected that the lower Courts had acted without jurisdiction. Certain differences having arisen among the three partners, two of them called upon the executors of the third to nominate an arbitrator under the terms of the deed, but they refused to do so. of objection within the meaning of section 520 or section 521 of the Code. Held, that the word "parties" as used in section 525 should not be confined to persons who are actually before the arbitrators; that if persons by an agreement have undertaken between themselves that, in the event of a certain state of things happening, a particular procedure shall be followed, which, under one state of circumstances, may be adopted in invitum, they should, for the purposes of section 525, be regarded as parties to that arbitration; and that there was sufficient reason to show that the defendants in the present case were primâ facie bound by the arbitration, so as to bring them within the terms of section 525 as parties thereto, who should be called on to show cause why the award should not be filed. Willcox v. *Storkey, L. 159. ——— Sufficient cause.—Objections to filing award.—Setting aside award.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 327.—In an application under section 327 of Act VIII of 1859 to have an award filed in Court so as to be enforced as a decree, it was objected on behalf of the defendant, amongst other things, that the award, which determined the succession to a talookdari registered under Act I of 1869, having been based on a certain will produced, which in terms referred to another will of the same testator not produced, there was miscarriage on the part of the arbitrators in making their award; the whole of the will, in the absence of the last-mentioned document, not having been before them. It appeared that the defendant in the proceedings before the arbitrators, notwithstanding the knowledge that this document was withheld, submitted nevertheless to take his chances of the arbitration; suggesting in fact favourable presumptions to himself in construing the will produced, or that the whole will not having been produced, it should be declared not to be operative, and that consequently the dispute should be determined according to the British law of succession as laid down by Act I of 1869, or according to custom, or according to the Mahomedan law of succession. Held, that the award could not be set aside on the ground of the objection taken. According to the true construction thereof, the earlier sections are not incorporated into section 327 of Act VIII of 1859, as they are into section 326. The words "sufficient cause" in section 327 should be taken to comprehend any substantial objection which appears on the face of the award, or is founded on the misconduct of the arbitrators, or on any miscarriage in the course of the proceedings, or upon any other ground which would be considered fatal to an award on an application to the Courts in England. The Mohunt of the temple neglected to take out a license in respect of these arms under Act XI of 1878. A Police Inspector, who was appointed to see that the provisions of the latter Act were obeyed, searched the temple on information received, and, having found the arms, prosecuted the persons who had charge of the temple. The latter was convicted by the Deputy Magistrate of Patna under section 19, clause (f) of Act XI of 1878, and sentenced to pay a fine of R50, or to be rigorously imprisoned for two months. The Deputy Magistrate also ordered the arms to be confiscated, and directed that their value and the fine should be divided between the informer and the Police Inspector. On a reference from the Sessions Judge of Patna,—Held, with reference to Act X of 1872, section 579, and the last heading to schedule iv of the same Act, and to section 19, clause (f) of Act XI of 1878, that the proceedings of the Police Inspector and the conviction of the accused were not illegal. There is nothing in the Arms Act to exempt the custodians of a temple from complying with the requirements of the Arms Act, either by taking out a license or obtaining exemption under section 27. Section 25 of the Arms Act appears to refer to cases in which the Magistrate considers that arms, whether under a license or not, are possessed for an illegal purpose, or under circumstances such as to endanger the public peace. Section 30 of the Arms Act appears to contemplate the presence of some specially empowered officer besides the officer conducting the search. EMPRESS v. TEGHA SINGH

He should not go without such notice and after the trial has been completed by delivery of the opinion of the assessors. IN RE OUDH BEHARI NARAIN SINGH . . . . 1 C. L. R., 143

12. ——— Assessors viewing scene of offence.—Power of Judge to delegate examination of witnesses.—In case of a view of the scene of an alleged offence, it is the duty of the officer conducting the jury or assessors to the spot not to suffer any other persons to speak to or hold any communication with any of the jury or assessors. The Judge therefore cannot delegate to the assessors his own function of examining witnesses on the spot. QUEEN v. CHUTTERDHAREE SINGH [5 W. R., Cr., 59

13. ——— Trial without Assessors.—Prisoner admitting offence but pleading insanity at time of committing it.—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s. 324.—The prisoner having admitted before the Court of Sessions that he had killed his wife, no assessors were empannelled. At the end, however, of his confession he pleaded that he was not in his right mind at the time. The Judge, therefore, proceeded to record medical and other evidence on the point, and, having come to the conclusion that there was no reason to doubt from the prisoner's conduct, either prior or subsequent to the murder, that in committing the murder he knew that he was doing a wrongful act, convicted the prisoner. Held, that the plea was in effect one of not guilty, and that the trial should not have proceeded without assessors, and that it should be quashed. 120. ——— Imprisonment, Period of.—Subsequent arrest in execution.—Civil Procedare Code, Act XIV of 1882, ss. 481 and 342.—The defendant was arrested before judgment, and on the 5th February 1883, committed to jail under section 481 of the Civil Procedure Code. On the 6th March following a decree in the suit was passed against him. On the 28th July, the defendant being then still in jail under the order of the 5th February, the plaintiff took out a fresh warrant of arrest in execution of the decree, and sought to have the defendant further imprisoned for the full period of six months limited by section 342 of the Code. Held, that the defendant could be re-committed to jail, in execution of the decree, only for such a period as, together with the period of imprisonment that had elapsed since the passing of the decree, would complete a period of six months,, and that consequently, he would be entitled to be liberated on the 5th September 1883. Imprisonment under section 481 becomes, after decree, imprisonment in execution of the decree, and the imprisonment suffered after that date must consequently be taken into consideration in calculating the period of six months, which, by section 342 of the Code, is the limit allowed for an imprisonment in execution of a decree. Twelve years after the attachment, no further steps having been taken in the matter, the execution case was struck off the file, and the property was afterwards mortgaged by the judgment-debtors to R. Subsequently, a fresh attachment was issued at the instance of the heirs of the former attaching creditor, under which the property was put up for sale subject to R.'s mortgage, and R. herself became the purchaser. The property was subsequently released from attachment, but was again attached, and was brought to sale in execution of the decree held by the Delhi Bank, and purchased by the defendants. The Mussoorie Savings Bank sued the auction-purchasers, claiming the right to bring the property to sale on the ground of its being under mortgage to the Bank prior to its purchase by the defendants. Its was held that under the circumstances the defendants must take the consequences of having purchased the property without having satisfied themselves as to its condition. Had it not been for the conduct of the Delhi Bank, however, the rule that a private bonâ fide alienation for value of property attached under Act VIII of 1859 is, by virtue of section 240 of the Act, null and void only as against the attaching creditor or persons who may acquire rights under or through the attachment, would have saved the defendants, and it would have done so notwithstanding that the sale of the property in suit took place in pursuance of a second attachment. IV, No. 141.*—A judgment-debtor whose property had been attached in execution of a money-decree, sold the property, and out of the price paid into Court the amount of the decree, and prayed that the attachment might be removed. While the attachment was subsisting, and prior to the sale, the holders of other money-decrees against the same judgment-debtor preferred applications, purporting to be made under section 295 of the Civil Procedure Code, and praying that the proceeds of the sale of the property might be rateably divided between themselves and the attaching creditor. The Court refused to remove the attachment until these creditors had been paid. It was found that the sale by the judgment-debtor was a bonâ fide transaction, entered into for valuable consideration. Held that, inasmuch as no order for attachment of the property was passed in favour of the decree-holders in manner provided by section 274 of the Civil Procedure Code, their claims were not entitled to the protection conferred by section 276 against private alienations of property under attachment; that these claims were not enforceable under the attachment which was made; that the sale by the judgment-debtor was valid; and that execution of the decrees could not take place. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That section 276 of the Civil Procedure Code, being a restriction of private rights of alienation, should be strictly construed; that before property can be subjected to such restriction, there must be a perfected attachment; that the orders passed under section 295 did not amount to such attachment, and that, even assuming them to amount to such attachment, they, not having been duly intimated and notified, could not make the prohibition of section 276 applicable to the case. Mahadeo Dubey v. *Bhola Nath Dichit, I. The objection having been allowed under Act VIII of 1859, section 246, M. brought a suit to have the mokurrari declared to be invalid and fictitious. Held, that plaintiff was not required to cause M.'s admitted proprietary right to be sold before she could maintain her suit. Held, that the act of the Court in striking off the execution proceeding because of the inability of the decree-holder to furnish the required security, was only for the convenience of business, and it left intact all the proceedings which had been taken up to that stage; nor did the decree-holder abandon the attachment, which was therefore subsisting when the mokurrari pottah was granted. Accordingly the alienation of the property by the pottah was invalid and inoperative. SOONDUR SINGH v. BUHOORIA ALUM BASHEE 24 W. R., 36

Nothing was done by the decree-holder until the 30th November 1874, when a fresh application for attachment and sale was made. 1. ——— Penal Code, s. 511.—Mischief by fire.—Possession of a fire-ball.—Held by GLOVER, J., that incendiarism having, on several occasions, occurred in a village, produced by a ball of rag, with a piece of burning charcoal within it, and the prisoner one evening being discovered to have a ball of that description concealed in his dhoti, which contained burning charcoal, he is, under section 511 of the Penal Code, guilty of an attempt to commit mischief by fire. The possession of the instrument to commit mischief by fire, and the going about of the person with it, are sufficient to raise a presumption that he intended to commit the act, and had already begun to move towards the execution. These facts are sufficient to constitute an attempt. Held by MITTER, J., that the possession of a fire-ball and moving about with it cannot support a conviction under sections 436 and 511 of the Penal Code. These facts are not sufficiently indicative of an intention to destroy a building used for human dwelling. To constitute an offence under section 511 of the Penal Code, it is not only necessary that the prisoner should have done an overt act towards commission of the offence, but that the act itself should have been done in the attempt to commit it. Therefore where the prisoner presented an uncapped gun at F. G. (believing the gun to be capped) with the intention of murdering him, but was prevented from pulling the trigger,—Held, that he could not be convicted of an attempt to murder upon a charge framed under section 307 of the Penal Code, but that under the same circumstances he might be convicted upon

5. ——— Attempt to murder.—A young Brahman widow was confined of a child. The chief constable of police, acting, as he stated, on information that the accused was about to kill a baby, went to search her house with a number of men, and found her lying on the first floor and discovered on the second floor a living new-born child wrapped up in a cloth with a cooking pot turned over it. The Sessions Judge convicted the accused of attempt to murder. The High Court on appeal reversed the conviction, on the ground that the evidence was insufficient to support it. 6. ——— Fabricating false evidence.—Concealment of salt.—Facts showing that an accused person had dug a hole intending to place salt therein, in order that the discovery of the salt so placed might be used in evidence against his enemy in a judicial proceeding, would justify a conviction for an attempt to fabricate false evidence. THE QUEEN v. NUNDA . . . . . 4 N. W., 133

7. ——— Intention to commit offence.—To constitute the offence of attempt under section 511, Penal Code, there must be an act done with the intention of committing an offence, and for the purpose of committing that offence, and it must be done in attempting the commission of the offence. The provisions of section 511, Penal Code, do not extend to make punishable as attempts acts done in the mere stage of preparation. Although such acts are doubtless done towards the commission of the offence, they are not done in the attempt to commit the offence within the meaning of the word "attempt" as used in the section. 8. ——— Attempt to cheat.—In a prosecution for an attempt to cheat, under sections 417, 511 of the Penal Code, the accused was charged and convicted of having at the central octroi office made false representations as to the contents of certain kuppas (skin vessels), the object of which was to obtain a certificate entitling him to obtain a refund of octroi duty. Prior to granting the certificate, the octroi officers examined the contents of the kuppas and found that the representations of the accused regarding them were untrue. In consequence of this discovery no certificate was given to him, and he was charged and convicted as above mentioned. The procedure necessary for obtaining a refund of octroi duty was that the central office, on satisfying itself that the articles produced were of the nature stated, would grant a certificate, which certificate would have to be indorsed by the outpost clerk when he passed the goods (on which refund was claimed) out of the town, and the owner would have to take back the certificate so indorsed to the central office and present it to be cashed. Held, that even assuming the accused to have falsely represented the contents of the kuppas as alleged, he had not completed an attempt to cheat, but had only made preparation for cheating, and that the conviction must therefore be set aside. 6. ——— Taxation of bill of costs.—Interest on costs.—Rate of interest.—The plaintiff, an attorney of the High Court, made advances to the defendant, a banker and merchant, for whom he had been and was then acting in certain litigation in which the defendant was engaged in the High Court. At the time of the first loan in 1869, the defendant was considerably indebted, and one creditor had issued execution against his property, and he also owed the plaintiff a large sum for costs, for which, however, up to that time, no bills of costs had been delivered. Before the first loan the plaintiff delivered bills for all his costs then due, of which some were incurred in completed and others in pending suits, and offered to have them taxed; but the defendant then said there was no need for taxation, which would only increase his expenses. The advances were made on the security of mortgages executed by the defendant. The first was executed in August 1869, and the principal was repayable in February 1871. Interest was to be payable at 12 per cent. per annum, and compound interest at the same rate was also to be charged on all interest in arrear. In September 1870 a further advance on the same terms was made and a further mortgage executed, which included the original sum, with the interest then due, and the further advance. Further advances were made in the same way in October 1871 and March 1876. In all these transactions the defendant had no independent professional advice, and the mortgages were prepared in the plaintiff's office, but not charged for. In a suit to recover the sum due on the mortgages by sale of the mortgaged property, the plaintiff abandoned any accumulation of interest since the date of the third mortgage. Held that the defendant, notwithstanding he had declined the offer of the plaintiff in 1869 to tax the bills, and notwithstanding the delay that had taken place, was entitled (having regard to the relation between the parties, and to the fact that a portion of the costs was incurred in suits then pending) to have the bills taxed and to re-open the account. Under the circumstances, the Court would not infer acquiescence from the delay on the part of the defendant, nor did the plaintiff's offer to tax, and the defendant's refusal of that offer, debar the defendant of his right to have the bills taxed in the usual way. Held, also, that there is no rule which prevents an attorney from taking security or otherwise arranging with his client for the payment of costs which have actually become due, and that the plaintiff was entitled to sale of the property, to accumulations of interest prior to the date of the third mortgage calculated by allowing annual rests, to interest at 10 per cent. as being a fair rate for the client to have undertaken to pay when the mortgages were executed, and to interest on his costs. Section 1 provides that nothing in the Act contained shall affect any usage or custom of trade, and, as no part of the English law is inconsistent with section 171, cases arising in this country must be governed by the English authorities. They received no reply from the plaintiff, who afterwards obtained leave to sue as a pauper, and appeared by other solicitors. Messrs. P. and W. were subsequently served with a subpœna to produce, at the hearing, certain translations and other documents relating to the plaintiff's case which had remained in their possession, and upon which they claimed a lien in respect of costs due to them by the plaintiff. Held, that Messrs. P. and W. could not be compelled to produce. A solicitor who is discharged by his client, holds the papers entrusted to him, subject to his lien for costs, and the plaintiff by her conduct had discharged Messrs. P. and W. from being her solicitors. A solicitor has the same lien upon translations as he has upon other documents, and the fact that they have been made by the Court's interpreters makes no difference. 4. ———— Further remand.—Evidence of guilt.—Necessity of taking evidence before refusing bail.—When an accused person is first brought before a Magistrate and a remand is required by the prosecutor, it is ordinarily sufficient to show by the evidence of a police officer that the police are in possession of information, believed to be reliable, that the accused has committed an offence; but when the accused is again brought up after remand and a further remand is needed, some direct evidence of the guilt of the accused should be required to justify the Magistrate in refusing bail, and with each remand the necessity for production of evidence of guilt becomes stronger. 5. ———— Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, ss. 190, 194.—Remand of case for evidence.—Judicial proceeding.—Reasonable ground for remand not supported by sworn testimony.—The proceeding in which it has to be determined whether an accused person should be admitted to bail by a Magistrate is a judicial proceeding, and, as such, cognizable by the High Court under section 297 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1872. Section 194 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, must be read as a proviso to section 190, and authorizes a Magistrate for reasonable cause to remand an accused person to jail without examining any witnesses. Where evidence was available, but it appeared necessary to the Magistrate to defer the examination of witnesses in order that further evidence might be produced (so that the enquiry when commenced might be continuous),—Held, that such a reason recorded by the Magistrate, although not sworn to, justified a remand for five days and a further remand for four days. An accused person has a right to have the evidence against him recorded at as early a period as possible, and the fact that there is or may be a great body of evidence forthcoming against him is not a ground for detention for an inordinate period. Per Kernan, J.—When a Magistrate defers the examination of witnesses, adjourns the enquiry, and remands the prisoner under section 194 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1872, he is bound to express clearly on the record the reasonable cause from which such action became necessary or advisable. 3. ——— Right of client to sue for return of fee when barrister was absent.—Advocate and client.—Taking it that the rule of English law, that the relation of counsel or advocate and client creates mutual incapacity to make a binding contract of hiring and service either express or implied, governs the relation of advocate and client generally in this country, there must be the relation of advocate and client to give rise to the incapacity, and the incapacity is strictly confined to contracts relating to service as an advocate in litigation and matters ancillary to such service. The degree of barrister is but one of the qualifications for admission and enrolment as an advocate of the High Court. Where the defendant, a barrister who was not admitted an advocate of the High Court, or specially authorized to plead in the superior Court, accepted a vakalatnamah from the plaintiff to defend him upon a charge pending in the Session Court, and the defendant failed to appear on the day to which the trial of the plaintiff was adjourned, and the plaintiff sued the defendant to recover the amount of the fee paid,—Held, that the suit was maintainable. Defendants Nos. 1 and 2 resisted on the ground that S.'s conditional sale did not pass the rights and interest of P., which they bought at an auction sale in execution of a decree against P. Held, that the decree of foreclosure was good and binding against Nos. 1 and 2, unless they could show fraud. If property is purchased in the name of a benamidar, and the indicia of ownership are placed in his hands, the true owner can only get rid of the effect of an alienation by showing that it was made without his acquiescence, and the purchaser took with notice of the fact. 21. ——— Breach of covenant.—Cause of action.—Plaint.—Consent of benamidar.—The plaint alleged that the three first defendants with a brother, since deceased, purchased a putni mehal therein described; that the same was thereafter sold for arrears of rent, and purchased by the said three defendants with their own funds; but that the Collector, in compliance with their petition, entered the name of their mother, the fourth defendant, as the purchaser. The plaint then alleged a subsequent sale by the three first defendants to the plaintiff; that they, the said defendants, caused a kobala to be executed by the fourth defendant, and that they, being the real owners, became witnesses to the deed, and received the whole of the consideration-money; and prayed by reason of ouster and disturbance alleged for damages against all the defendants for breach of the following covenant contained in the kobala: "If any one making any objection to the sale by me of the said mehal give you trouble in any way, then I will put matters straight. If I fail to do so, I will return the consideration-money. If I do not return it, you will realize it by means of a suit." The Civil Judge in whose Court the plaint was filed held that no cause of action was shown, and the High Court on appeal remanded the case to try whether there had been the ouster and disturbance alleged, and whether, under the circumstances, they constituted a breach of the contract. The High Court, however, dismissed the suit against the three first defendants, holding that the mother only was bound by the contract. Held by the Privy Council, that the plaint disclosed a cause of action against all the defendants, and that the case must be remanded accordingly. One issue raised by the plaint was whether the kobala

M.* upon the bond, and while it was pending the property in dispute was sold in execution of H.'s decree for costs, and purchased by S. The day after this,—i.e., on 10th November 1868,—P. M. obtained a mortgage decree, which he transferred to R. B., who executed it and attached the property in dispute, when S. intervened, objecting that the mortgage, the mortgage decree, and the transfer of the decree were all fictitious and collusive, and brought about by P. L. This objection having been rejected, a suit was brought on the same ground against R. B., P. M., and the widow of P. L. to establish S.'s rights and to stop the pending sale. The property was, however, sold, and purchased by D., who was then made a defendant in the suit. Both the lower Courts found that R. B. was a benamidar for *P. 65. ——— Agreement to reconvey.—A.'s property was sold under a decree to B., a bonâ fide purchaser, who offered to A. to re-convey to him on being repaid the purchase-money. Held, that if A. accepted the proposal, section 260 of the Civil Procedure Code did not preclude a contract from arising. MOR JOSHI v. MUHAMMAD IBRAHIM [10 Bom., 344

66. ——— Suit for possession against certified purchaser.—Suit for possession by purchaser from certified purchaser at an execution sale. Defendant in possession not only denied plaintiff's title, but that of his vendor, whose purchase was clearly fraudulent, being made in collusion with the judgment-debtor to defraud creditors. Held that section 260, Act VIII of 1859, did not prohibit a defendant under such circumstances from questioning the plaintiff's title; that it provided for the dismissal of a suit brought to question the title of the certified purchaser, but did not prohibit a defendant from questioning that title when the auction-purchaser sought to oust him. KHYRAT ALI v. SYFULLAH KHAN . . . 8 W. R., 130

67. ——— Previous possession of party claiming to be the real purchaser.—The correct interpretation of section 260, Act VIII of 1859, is to the effect that a suit by a party claiming to be the real purchaser of immoveable property sold in execution of a decree, cannot be brought against the certified auction-purchaser, even though the claimant has had previous possession. BYKUNT CHUNDER MOOSTAFEE v. KHEMA MOYEE DEBIA . . . . . 9 W. R., 360

68. ——— Certified purchase.—Purchaser under second sale in execution of decree.—The certified purchaser of property which had been a second time attached and sold in the execution of a decree as the property of the judgment-debtors, sued to be confirmed in possession of the property by virtue of his certificate of sale and to obtain the cancelment of the second sale and the order disallowing his objections to that sale. Held, that the provisions of section 260 of Act VIII of 1859 did not prohibit the consideration of the circumstances of the first sale, when the question for determination was whether, at the time of the second attachment, the judgment-debtors were in possession as owners of the property, or merely as lessees of the certified purchaser. GANESH PERSHAD v. SHEO CHURUN LALL . . . 6 N. W., 197

69. ——— Suit by decree-holder against certified purchaser.—Section 260 of Act VIII of 1859 does not preclude the Courts from entertaining a suit brought by a decree-holder against the certified purchaser of property to bring the property to sale in execution of his decree as the property of his judgment-debtor, on the allegation that the certified purchaser had purchased the property benami for the judgment-debtor, who had remained in possession as owner from the date of purchase, and was in possession as such at the time of attachment. SOHUN LALL v. LALA GYA PERSHAD [6 N. W., 265

70. ——— Onus probandi.—Where plaintiff, as heir of the ostensible auction-purchaser, sued to oust defendant, who had been twelve years in possession, and the latter pleaded that the sale was made benami,—Held, that the long possession would go to prove the truth of defendant's allegation that the auction-purchaser was merely a trustee for him, and it would be for plaintiff to show that his ancestor paid for the purchased property. Held that sections 259 and 260, Act VIII of 1859, did not apply, as the sale was made before that law came into operation. ZOOLFEKAR ALI v. MAHOMED TUKEE . . 9 W. R., 438

71. ——— Certified purchaser.—The purchaser of immoveable property, sold in execution of a decree of a Civil Court, got a certificate under section 259 of Act VIII of 1859, and subsequently sued for possession of that which he had purchased. Held, that the defendant (who was in possession) was by section 260 debarred from pleading that he himself was the real purchaser, and that the purchase was made benami for him in the name of the plaintiff, the "certified purchaser." 72. ——— Certified purchaser.—Certificate of sale, Form of.—Liability of property to son's creditors.—There is nothing fraudulent or illegal in a father making provision that property over which he has complete control shall not go into the hands of an insolvent son; but a benami conveyance to female members, the father continuing the absolute and uncontrolled owner during his life, and the son entering into possession after his death, cannot exclude the claim of the son's creditors. Where a purchaser at a sale in execution was named in the sale certificate as "mother and guardian of her infant son," the title to the property was held to be vested by the certificate in the minor absolutely. 74. ——— Suit by purchaser.—In a suit for possession of a tank, on the allegation that plaintiff purchased it in execution of a decree against one S. D., and that, after being put in possession, she was subsequently ousted, defendant's plea being possession after prior purchase at an execution sale under a decree against the same S. D.; the lower Court found that the defendant's purchase was a fictitious transaction, being in reality for the benefit of S. D., who was in actual possession and enjoyment of the property at the time of the plaintiff's purchase. Held, that the case did not come under the purview of section 260, Act VIII of 1859. TARA SOONDUREE DABEE v. OOJUL MONEE DASSEE [14 W. R., 111

75. ——— Right of suit.—Fraud.—J. and B. borrowed a sum of money on a mortgage of property. Shortly after this they granted a mokurrari of the property to plaintiff and afterwards sold their rights as proprietors to one R. R. Subsequently to this the mortgagee brought a suit against the mortgagors, and obtained a decree declaring the property liable to be sold in satisfaction of his debt. The property was accordingly sold in execution and purchased by one R. D., and the sale proceeds were made over to the judgment-creditor. Plaintiff as mokurraridar now sues to obtain possession on the ground that the debt being paid off the mortgage is no longer in existence. The Judge having found that the purchase by R. D. was not bonâ fide, but for and on the part of R. R., who was in actual possession,—Held, that section 260 of the Code of Civil Procedure was no bar to the suit, the ground of fraud alone giving plaintiff sufficient right to question the legality of the sale. SHAMA KESHEE v. RAJ KISHORE . . . . 14 W. R., 179

76. ——— Suit against certified purchaser.—If a person is the person to whom, under section 259, Act VIII of 1859, a Court is directed to grant a sale certificate, he is entitled to be regarded as the "certified purchaser" at any time after the acceptance of his bid at the execution sale, even though the certificate may not actually have been granted to him before any suit against him, in connection with the property purchased by him, has been instituted; and section 260 applies so as to bar a suit by the alleged real purchaser against him. BUNDA ALI KHAN v. AMEERUN . . . 25 W. R., 493

77. ——— Suit by certified purchaser.—Section 260 of Act VIII of 1859 must be construed strictly and literally, and is applicable only to a suit brought against a certified purchaser to assert a benami title against him. Where the certified purchaser is a plaintiff, the real owner, if in possession, and if that possession has been honestly obtained, may show in defence that the holder of the certificate is a mere trustee. LOKHEE NARAIN ROY CHOWDHRY v. KALYPADDO BANDOPADHYA [L. R., 2 I. A., 154: 23 W. R., 358

78. ——— Sale in execution of decree.—Certified purchaser.—Benami purchase.—A talook in possession of a mortgagee was put up for sale under an execution against the mortgagor, and was bought by A. in his own name, but benami for the mortgagee. A. obtained a certificate as purchaser, and was put formally in possession, the mortgagee remaining in actual possession. In a suit by A. in ejectment to recover possession of the property purchased,—Held (dissentiente L. S. JACKSON, J.), that the defendant was debarred not only by section 260, but by the general provisions of the Act, from pleading that the plaintiff, the certified purchaser, purchased not on his own behalf but benami for him, the defendant. Such defendant must show a transfer of title to him from the purchaser, in whom alone, under the certificate, the title of the judgment-debtor has vested. The object of section 260 is to prevent any enquiry between the purchaser de facto and any person on whose behalf he is alleged to have purchased. Held, on appeal (reversing the decision of the High Court), that section 260 of Act VIII of 1859 is to be construed strictly, and that no suit would lie by A. against the mortgagee to redeem. The suit was instituted after Act VIII of 1859 was repealed and Act X of 1877 came into force. When the suit was instituted, K. did not hold a sale-certificate. After it was instituted he applied for and obtained a sale-certificate under section 317 of Act X of 1877. Held, that when the suit was instituted, it was maintainable, as, the defendant not being a certified purchaser under section 260 of Act VIII of 1859, that section did not apply; and that when the defendant obtained a certificate under section 317 of Act X of 1877, he became a certified purchaser, and the suit would only be maintainable if the plaintiff made out a case falling within the provisions of the last part of section 317. Subsequently the mother mortgaged the property, and the mortgagee brought a suit, obtained a decree, and had the property sold and purchased it himself. Upon his being resisted by the daughter in attempts to get his name registered as proprietor, he instituted a suit against both mother and daughter to establish his rights to the property. The daughter thereupon objected that such would not lie by reason of the provisions of section 317 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that the provisions of that section, which were intended to prevent fraud, were inapplicable to the facts of the case, and that the suit was maintainable. 1. ——— Hindu Law.—Mahomedan Law.—Convert.—"Justice, equity, and good conscience."—To entitle a person to have the Hindu or Mahomedan law applied to him under the first paragraph of section 24 of Act VI of 1871, he must be an orthodox believer in the Hindu or Mahomedan religion. The mere circumstance that he calls himself, or is called by others, a Hindu or Mahomedan, as the case may be, is not enough. His only claim to have a special kind of law applied to him is that he follows and observes a particular religion that of itself creates his law for him. If he fails to establish his religion, his privilege to the application of its law fails also, and he must be relegated to that class of persons whose cases have to be dealt with under the latter paragraph of section 24 of Act VI of 1871 according to justice, equity, and good conscience. B., alleging that his family was a joint undivided Hindu family, sued R., his father, for a declaration that certain property was joint ancestral property, and for partition of his share according to the Hindu law of inheritance of such property, viz., one moiety. R. set up as a defence to the suit that the members of the family were Mahomedans, and were therefore not governed by the Hindu law. The evidence in the suit established that the members of the family were neither orthodox Hindus nor Mahomedans. It also established that the Hindu law of inheritance had always been followed in the family. Held, following the principle enunciated above, that the family not being Hindus nor Mahomedans, the rule of decision applicable to the suit was neither Hindu nor Mahomedan law, but justice, equity, and good conscience; that, the Hindu law of inheritance having always been followed in the family, it was justice, equity, and good conscience to apply that law to the suit; and that therefore B. was entitled to demand partition of half of the family estate. Abraham v. *Abraham, 9 Moore's I. 2. ——— Mahomedan Law—Pre-emption.—Under section 24 of Act VI of 1871, Mahomedan law is not strictly applicable in suits for pre-emption between Mahomedans not based on local custom or contract, but it is equitable in such suits to apply that law. The application of Mahomedan law in a suit for pre-emption between a Mahomedan claimant of pre-emption and a Mahomedan vendee, on the basis of that law, is not precluded by the circumstance of the vendor not being a Mahomedan. The accused were sentenced by the Presidency Magistrate, under sections 58 and 74 of the Bengal Excise Act, to a fine of R200 each, in default to three months' imprisonment, and in addition to six months' imprisonment, which was the maximum term that could be awarded under section 74. Held, that the sentence of imprisonment was not in excess of the powers given to the Magistrate by section 12 of the Presidency Magistrates Act, the imposition of the additional sentence of imprisonment not affecting the Magistrate's powers as regarded the original sentence under section 58. Regular reports signed by medical men would constitute evidence within the meaning of that section. Section 79 does not authorize Municipal Commissioners to close a burning-ground which has been used for very many years merely because they think that the burning of dead bodies is offensive. It allows them to interfere only when it shall appear to them upon the evidence of competent persons that any burning-ghat or burying-ground is in such a state as to be dangerous to the health of persons living in the neighbourhood thereof. Defendants' case was that the land had been in possession of Government till Bengal Act III of 1864 was extended to Howrah, since which time the Commissioners had held the land. Held, that the plaintiffs' cause of action could not be considered to have first arisen on the refusal of the Municipality to remove the stones. Held (by BAYLEY, J.), that the Municipal Commissioners had acted properly under the law, and were entitled to the application of section 87, Bengal Act III of 1864. Held (by PHEAR, J.), that section 87 could only protect defendants if sued for damages consequent on a wrong done by them in the reasonable belief that they were exercising their lawful powers; not if they were sued by parties kept out of possession by their continued wrong-doing. 3. ——————— Suit against Municipal Commissioners for possession of land.—Previous to the institution of the present suit, one of the shareholders of a piece of land brought a suit against the Chairman of the Municipality for recovery of possession of his share. The other shareholders were made pro formâ defendants in the suit. This suit was dismissed as barred by the law of limitation. After the dismissal of the suit, the plaintiff brought the present suit for recovery of his share of the land, on the allegation that his tenant had relinquished the land within three months in consequence of his having been dispossessed by the Municipal Commissioners. Held that section 87, Bengal Act III of 1864, did not apply. Semble,—Bengal Act III of 1864, section 87, relates only to actions brought in respect of acts done by the Commissioners under that Act for the purpose of the Act. VIII of 1831.—Repeal, Effect of.*—A summary suit for rent under section 15, Regulation VII of 1799, was pending when Act X of 1859 came into force, and was, therefore, governed by Regulation VIII of 1831, section 4 of which declared that the decision in the summary suit should be final, subject to a regular suit. By section 1, Act X of 1859, Regulation VII of 1799, sections 1 to 20 and Regulation VIII of 1831 were repealed, except as to proceedings commenced before the date of the Act coming into force. Held, that the repealing section did not take away the right to bring a regular suit. The Regulation is not confined to prisoners of war or foreigners held in confinement for political reasons. The substance of Regulation III of 1818 was expressly re-enacted by Act XXXIV of 1850 and Act III of 1858, and therefore, as the result of these later Acts alone, the detention would be legal. ——— Assessment of land formerly occupied for Government salt-works.—Upon the relinquishment by the Government of lands, within the ambit of a permanently-settled zemindari, continuously used before and since the perpetual settlement of salt-works from the commencement of salt-making by the Government, until after the passing of Regulation I of 1824, the provisions of that Regulation are applicable to the mutual rights of the zemindar and of the Government. Such lands were held by the officers of the Salt Department, in terms of clause 11 of that Regulation, "free of rent" and "under a perpetual title of occupancy," whether belonging to a permanently-settled estate or not. The force of the Regulation and the right of the Government to assess such lands are not affected by 'khalari' payments having been made, among other compensations, by the Government to the zemindar; and clause 11 appears to contemplate some such payment. On a settlement of the relinquished lands, 'khalari' payments, being "sums remitted to the zemindars and to be allowed in perpetuity" within the meaning of the 4th clause of section 9 of Regulation I of 1824, must be continued to the zemindar; or, if a settlement should be made with others, he should be assessed only for the land retained by him. The zemindar took proceedings against the tenant, under Regulation VIII of 1819, for the recovery of the entire amount of rent, notwithstanding the tenant had supplied the rice and was entitled to the reduction. The tenant, without contesting his liability, or demanding an investigation as to the amount due, paid the entire amount. Held, that this was not "an exaction from the ryot of a sum in excess of the rent specified in the pottah" within the meaning of section 10, Act X of 1859 (Bengal Act VIII of 1869, section 11), and that a suit was not maintainable in respect of it under the Rent Act. The suit was first brought in the Revenue Court, and as their co-sharers had not joined in the suit, the plaintiffs made them defendants, and their being defendants preventing the plaintiffs from continuing the suit in the Revenue Court, they instituted it afresh in the Civil Court after Bengal Act VIII of 1869 came into operation. The defendants objected that, under the limitation provided by section 29 of that Act, no more than three years' rent could be recovered; but the Judge held, affirming the decision of the Munsif, that the case was governed by clause 16, section 1, Act VIII of 1859, and that six years' rent could be decreed. Held, on special appeal to the High Court, that the fact of the co-sharers being made pro formâ defendants did not alter the real character of the suit, which was to recover arrears of rent, and that, therefore, the provisions of section 29, Act VIII of 1869, were applicable, and a decree for three years' rent only was given. Application for execution was made, in December 1877, against property other than that for which the rent was due; but was, in the first Court, opposed successfully by the judgment-debtor, on the ground that the under-tenure should first be proceeded against, though such under-tenure had already been sold away in execution of another decree, and the execution-proceeding was struck off on the 15th March 1878, and the property released from attachment. The judgment-creditor appealed, and was successful both in the lower Appellate Court and the High Court, the latter decision being dated 26th February 1879. The costs awarded him in these proceedings, if added to the amount of the decree, would amount to a sum of more than ₹500. The next application for execution was made on 19th August 1879. Held, that the costs of the appeals in the execution-proceedings should not be added to the decree; and, therefore, the decree being for less than ₹500, the provisions of section 58, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, applied to it. Held, also, that the attachment having been removed in March 1878, the execution of the decree was barred under that section. 13. ——— Special appeal.—Right to enhance or vary rent.—A special appeal was held to lie to the High Court under section 102, Bengal Act VIII of 1869 in a suit for rent below R100 in which the question of right to enhance had been determined. WATSON CO. v. RAM DHUN GHOSE

14. ——— Special appeal.—Question of title.—In this case the Judge dismissed plaintiff's suit, on the ground that no notice had been served on defendant, the nature of the suit being not one for enhancement, but to recover rent at rates previously settled, and no notice being therefore required. The value of the suit was under R100, and the High Court held that the Judge had not decided any right to vary or enhance the rent, and therefore they could not interfere, there being no appeal under Bengal Act VIII of 1869, section 102. 15. ——— Special appeal.—Question between parties having conflicting claims.—In a suit for rent less than R100, the decision turned upon whether, in a former suit against the plaintiff by a third party, a decree had been recovered for possession of a portion of the land now in dispute. Held, that as neither the land nor the rent of such portion was claimed by the defendant, the question as to title was not decided between parties having "conflicting claims" thereto; consequently there was no right of appeal. 16. ——— Special appeal.—Question of title.—The issue whether or not there has been a binding enhancement of rent, and whether or not the tenant has paid at the enhanced rate, involves no question of title or of right to enhance or vary the rent, and the appeal in such a suit properly lies to the Collector. 22. ——— Special appeal.—Question as to variation of rent.—In a suit for arrears of rent under ₹100, in which the question was whether the landlord had the right to raise, and had raised the rent, and the Judge decided that there had been no alteration in the rent,—Held, no appeal lay to the High Court. 24. ——— Special appeal.—Co-sharer.—Suit for rent.—The plaintiff, one of several co-sharers of a talook, sued to recover her share of rent, making her co-sharers, who resisted her claim, defendants. The first Court raised and tried questions of title between the plaintiff, her co-sharers, and the ryot, and decided in favour of the plaintiff. The lower Appellate Court, without expressing any opinion on the rights of the parties, dismissed the suit on the ground that it was not maintainable. On special appeal it was contended that no appeal would lie, as the amount of the claim was less than ₹100, and no question of title was determined by the judgment; but this objection was overruled, on the ground that the decree of the lower Appellate Court, dismissing the suit, had the effect of deciding the question of title against the plaintiff. On appeal under section 15 of the Letters Patent,—Held that the judgment, rather than the decree, is to be looked at in applying section 102, Bengal Act VIII of 1869. No appeal lay from the judgment of the lower Appellate Court, inasmuch as that judgment showed not only that no question of title was determined, but that the Judge did not even consider it. The plaintiff's jemadar took the cheque immediately to the bank, but the bank was closed. Thereupon he returned to C. N. & Co., and informed them that the bank was closed and demanded cash. The plaintiff alleged that it was then stated that the cheque would be honoured on Monday. The plaintiff's jemadar then went and informed the gomashta of the plaintiff of what had been done. The plaintiff's gomashta sent him to the defendant's firm to give him notice of what had taken place. It was alleged that at this interview the defendant's liability was admitted in case the cheque was not honoured, and the plaintiff's jemadar was advised to wait until Monday, the defendant stating that he also had a cheque for R7,000 from C. N. & Co. This was denied by the defendant. On Monday, 5th December, the cheque was presented to the bank for payment, and was dishonoured. The plaintiff's gomashta went to the defendant's koti, and gave notice of the dishonour of the bill and cheque, and asked him to pay the amount of the bill. The defendant asked for the bill, and the plaintiff's gomashta went to C. N. & Co. and brought back the bill, with the name of C. N. & Co., which had been struck out, replaced. The defendant, seeing the bill was overdue, refused to pay the amount. The cheque was thereupon returned to *C. Where there is no acceptance, no cause of action can arise to the payee against the drawee. Nor is the legal relation between the drawer and the payee altered by a partial acceptance, the contract being in its nature indivisible; much less can any mere promise to pay part at a future time in any way satisfy the payee's claim, or postpone his right to reimbursement of his loss from the drawer. 8. ——— Suit on bill by indorsee for value against acceptor.—Sale by indorsee of goods against which bill drawn.—Acceptor entitled to credit for amount of proceeds of sale.—J. consigned goods to defendant, and, for the price, drew on the defendant two bills of exchange, each for the sum of R1,406-4-0, payable thirty days after sight, which were duly accepted by defendant. J. indorsed the bills for value to the plaintiffs, who, in default of payment by defendant, sold the goods, and credited him with the amount realised. After giving him credit for this amount, there remained due by the defendant to the plaintiffs, in respect of the said bills, a sum of R1,017. The plaintiffs abandoned R17 of this amount, and sued the defendant for R1,000 in the Small Cause Court at Bombay. In that suit the defendant pleaded that the goods, in respect of which the bills were drawn, were damaged, and that he had, therefore, refused to accept them, as he was entitled to do. The Judge thereupon dismissed the suit on the authority of Shortt v. Abdul Rahiman, 6 Bom., O. C., 53, holding that the plaintiffs could not, under the circumstances, give the defendant credit for the goods, and that the claim was not, therefore, within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court. The plaintiffs then brought the present suit in the High Court upon the bills of exchange, alleging that they held the proceeds of the goods for the consignor. The defendant contended that in no case could the plaintiffs recover from him more than the amount of the bills, less the proceeds of the goods. Held, that the defendant was entitled to credit for the net proceeds of the sale of the goods. The plaintiffs had by the sale already realised part of the amount due to them; and to allow them now to recover from the defendant the whole amount due on the bills, would be to permit them to realise this part of their claim a second time: in that case they would be bound to hand over the amount so realized to the drawers. But the drawers when they negotiated the bills with the plaintiffs got all they were entitled to, and would have to account, in equity, to the defendant for anything further obtained by them. Held, therefore, that the defendant was exonerated to the amount of the proceeds of the goods, but was liable for the remainder of the sum claimed by the plaintiffs. And where the money realised by the sale was wrongfully applied by the agent, it was held by the Judicial Committee (affirming the judgment of the Court at Calcutta) that the remitter was entitled to recover the value of the bills in assumpsit, upon an indebitatus count from the purchaser of them, who had notice of the purpose for which they were remitted, and the misapplication of the proceeds by the agent. The steamer arrived in port late on Saturday, and sailed at day break on Monday without delivering the specie shipped by the plaintiff, who sued for damages. Held, that the Lord's Day Act, 29 Charles II, clause 7, did not apply to Moulmein; and that even if it had done so, it could not prevent the shipowners from availing themselves of the stipulation they had made, and that no action for damages was maintainable against them. The plaintiff shipped for conveyance from Hong-Kong to Bombay certain goods on board a steamer of the defendants, in packages which were proved to be insufficient. These goods, in accordance with a condition to that effect contained in the bill of lading, were transhipped at Galle. On their being landed in Bombay it was found that all the packages were broken, and in a much more damaged condition than is usual in the case of such goods carried from Hong-Kong to Bombay in similar packages. The contents had to a large extent escaped from the packages, but were otherwise uninjured. Held that, under a bill of lading in the above form, the onus of proving that the packages were insufficient, and that the injury which they had sustained was the consequence of such insufficiency, lay upon the defend-

6. ——— Insufficiency of package.—Negligence.—Mercantile usage, Evidence of.—The defendants carry between Hong-Kong and Bombay. By a condition annexed to their bill of lading they stipulated that they should not be responsible for damage to goods arising from insufficiency of package. The plaintiff shipped certain goods in the defendants' steamer, in packages which, though in fact insufficient, were packages of the kind ordinarily used for the conveyance of such goods from Hong-Kong to Bombay. On their being landed in Bombay it was found that the packages were more or less broken, and the contents were in some instances injured, and had to a small extent escaped from the packages. In an action brought to recover damages in respect of such injury, it was held that evidence of mercantile usage or of custom would be admissible to show that the words "insufficiency of package" should not be taken in their ordinary sense, but as meaning insufficient according to a special custom of the China trade. Held, also, that the evidence of those packages being ordinary China packages, and of such packages having always been carried by the defendants without objection, was not sufficient, in the absence of proof of negligence, to fix the defendants with liability for damage done to them, there being no proof that it had been the practice either of the defendants or any other ship-owners protected by a similar clause in their bill of lading to make compensation for injury to goods contained in such packages. When the ship arrived at port, the consignee not having had his own boats alongside, the goods were put into other boats, one of which, through the negligence of the boatmen, was swamped and the contents damaged. In landing the two cases, one of them was entirely destroyed owing to the carelessness of the company's servants. The plaintiff sued the company, setting out that the damage was occasioned by the negligence of the company's servants. The casks were described in the bill of lading as bearing a certain mark, beneath which was the word "Calcutta" as being the port of destination, and they were stated as being carried subject to the following exceptions: "The ship is not liable for obliteration or absence of marks, numbers, address or description of goods shipped: and expenses and losses by detention of ship or cargo, caused by incorrect marking, or by incomplete or incorrect description of contents, shall be borne by the owners of the goods. In case any part of the within goods cannot be found during the ship's stay at the port of destination, they are, when found, to be sent back by first steamer at the ship's risk and expense, and subject to any proved claim for loss of market. The ship shall not be liable for incorrect delivery, unless each package shall have been distinctly marked by the shippers before shipment with the port of destination." The bill of lading was endorsed by C. & Co. to the plaintiff, a trader in Calcutta, who, on the arrival of the Scindia at that port, applied for delivery of the four casks; and it then appeared that they had been landed at Colombo. In a suit to recover the price of the goods,—Held, the defendant was estopped from alleging that the casks were not marked as stated in the bill of lading. It was open, however, to the defendant to prove that the casks did not on their arrival at Colombo bear the word "Calcutta," and thus to bring himself within the clause in the bill of lading exempting the ship from liability for obliteration or absence of marks; but on proof of this, in order to disentitle the plaintiff to succeed, the defendant must show that the absence or obliteration caused the landing at Colombo. It was found on the evidence that he had failed to do this, and a decree was given for the plaintiff. MADHUB CHUNDER DEY v. LAW . 13 B. L. R., 394 value and paid enhanced freight on account of such value. By the bill of lading the company undertook to deliver the case in good order at Bimlipatam to the consignee M., subject to certain conditions annexed. By one of these conditions, if the consignee did not take delivery when the ship was ready to discharge, the goods might be warehoused at the merchant's risk, and the company's liability was to cease when the goods left the ship's side. The consignee did not take delivery at the ship's side, and the company's agent at Bimlipatam took the case to the Custom House, as he was bound to do by the regulations of the port. If the Superintendent of the Custom House had known that the case contained corals, it would have been placed in an inner room, but the company's agent did not know the contents of the case, and therefore was unable to give any such information to the Superintendent. While the case was lying at the Custom House, application was made on plaintiff's behalf to the company's agent for delivery of the case upon the usual guarantee. The agent refused to deliver the case without the production of the bill of lading. Afterwards the bill of lading was received from Madras and the case was delivered up. At some time between its leaving the ship's side and delivery to the consignee, the case was opened and a portion of the contents stolen. Held, that the defendants were not liable. 11. ——— Declaration of value and nature of contents.—A. was the consignee and holder of a bill of lading signed by B. at Bombay, as master of the steam-vessel John Bright, for the safe carriage and delivery of a box addressed to A., which in fact contained diamonds of the value of R11,670, three rubies, and three emeralds, in all of the value of R15,940. On the face of the bill of lading was printed, "This bill of lading is issued subject to the following conditions." One condition was that a "written declaration of the contents and value of the goods is required by the owner, and must be delivered by the shipper to the owner's agents with the bills of lading. A wrong description of contents or false declaration of value shall release the owner from all responsibility in case of loss, &c., and the goods shall be charged double freight on the real value, which freight shall be paid previous to delivery." The declaration in this case was contained in the following letter from the shipper to the agent of the ship-owner: "Dear Sir,—Be good enough to give me an order for a small box containing diamonds to the value of about R14,000, to be shipped on board the steamer John Bright for Calcutta. Yours, &c." The box was lost by the negligence of B. or his servants. In a suit by A. to recover "the value of the goods, viz., R14,000,"—Held, that all the ship-owner was entitled to was that the shipper should make a declaration of what bonâ fide he believed to be the value. The declaration as to contents was not vitiated by the omission to enumerate all the different species of articles contained in the box. Upon the evidence, the declaration as to the value and nature of the contents was bonâ fide; therefore A. was entitled to recover the value of the diamonds lost. The piece-goods, on their arrival in Bombay, were found to be damaged by oil and by chafing,—i.e., by rubbing against other goods in the hold,—but there was no evidence to show how such damage was occasioned. Held, that the term "leakage" did not include leakage from other goods on to the piece-goods, nor did "breakage" include damage caused by chafing, and that, as no negligence was proved, the master was not protected by the exception "damage from negligence." The steamer, on arriving at the port of discharge, came alongside the wharf, and commenced unloading at the custom-house godowns without giving the consignees the option of landing the goods from the ship's tackle. The consignees, however, did not object to the goods being landed at the godowns, and they paid, also without objection, a sum for the wharfage of a part of the goods in their godowns. Held that the ship-owners, if the goods placed in the godowns were in their possession as carriers, were protected under the clause of the bill of lading providing against fire, as much as if the fire had occurred on board ship; and on the other

17. ——————— Delivery in dock.—"Landing or cranage charges."—Practice of dock to recover from consignee.—Liability of ship-owner.—Certain boilers consigned to the plaintiff in Bombay were shipped at Liverpool in two steamers belonging to the same owners, under two bills of lading in these terms: "Shipped in good order and condition, &c., to be delivered, subject to the exceptions and conditions hereinafter mentioned, in the like good order and condition, from the ship's tackles (where the ship's responsibility shall cease) at the aforesaid port of Bombay," &c. One of the exceptions and conditions above referred to was as follows: "The ship-owner shall have the option of discharging in dock, and of making delivery of the goods under the bills of lading either over the ship's side or from lighters, or a store-ship, or custom-house, or warehouse, at merchant's risk." Freight was prepaid in Liverpool. On their arrival at Bombay the two steamers went into the Prince's Dock, belonging to the Port Trust, and discharged the boilers, by means of the Port Trust cranes, on to the dock wharves. The plaintiff subsequently sent to remove the boilers, but was not allowed by the dock authorities to do so until he had paid to them various sums, amounting in the aggregate to R930, on account, as stated in the bill furnished him by the Port Trust, of "landing charges" for the said boilers. The bills also contained certain additional charges for "wharfage." These the plaintiff was ready to pay, but the "landing charges" he paid only under protest, and in order to get possession of his goods, and now sought to recover the same from the defendants, who represented the ship-owners. It was the practice of the Port Trust to recover these charges in all cases from the consignees of goods discharged in their dock, and the charge was said to be levied on all goods landed on the wharves of the dock, whether by the dock's cranes, or by the ship's own tackles. The charge was incurred the moment the goods touched the wharf. In their rates, sanctioned by Government, which by their Act the Port Trust were entitled to charge, this charge was called, not a "landing charge," but a "dock and cranage" charge. Had the plaintiff been given delivery of these goods in the stream, and afterwards himself landed them at any wharf belonging to the Port Trust in the Port of Bombay, the Port Trust would have sought to have made the same charge for allowing the goods to be landed, whether that was done by their appliances or not. Held, that the ship-owner, and not the consignee, was bound to pay these charges, they being in reality charges for work and labour done in and about the landing of the goods—an operation which, under the bills of lading, was within the duty of the ship-owner. Per LATHAM, J.—The ship having elected to discharge in the dock, it was her duty to land the goods on the wharf. Every charge which had to be incurred before that could be done, was a charge antecedent to delivery, and one, therefore, which must be paid by the ship-owner. SCOTT v. FINLAY . . . I. L. BILL OF LADING.—Construction—continued.

Discrepancy in measurements.—Evidence—Burden of proof.—Suit by consignee for excess freight.—K. V. at Moulmein consigned to the plaintiff at Bombay 135 logs of teak timber shipped on board the defendant's ship. The bill of lading, which was signed by the defendant, described the logs as marked K. V., and measuring tons 115-12-10, and it provided for the payment of freight thereon at Bombay, at the rate of ₹17 per ton of 50 cubic feet on right delivery. The last clause of the bill of lading was in the handwriting of the defendant, and was as follows: "Marks, number, quantity, and measurement unknown: all other conditions as per charter-party." The charter-party was expressed to be between the owners of the ship and Messrs. B., of Rangoon, as charterers of the whole ship, and provided for the payment of freight "at the rate of ₹18 per ton of 50 cubic feet for all timber, one rate throughout, except 100 tons broken stowage at half freight, by intake measurement." On arrival of the ship at Bombay, the plaintiff, as consignee of the timber and holder of the bill of lading, paid the defendant (the captain of the ship) ₹1,500 on account of freight, and took delivery of the 135 logs. On measuring them he found that, according to his method of measurement, the total measurement of the 135 logs came only to tons 58-27-11-6, and not tons 115-12-10 as mentioned in the bill of lading. He claimed, therefore, to be chargeable with freight only on the smaller quantity (viz., ₹995-8), and to recover from the defendant the difference (viz., ₹504-8) between that sum and ₹1,500 paid on account as for an overpayment of freight. It was proved that all the timber on board had been measured at Moulmein by an employé of the charterers acting apparently as agent of all the different shippers, and that the measurements in the bills of lading were supplied by this person to the defendant as the measurements of the different consignments. It was also proved that the 135 logs received and measured by the plaintiff in Bombay were the same logs that were shipped under the bill of lading, and that the plaintiff's measurement of them was correct according to the mode of measurement which he adopted. There was no evidence as to what was the mode of measurement followed at Moulmein, nor, except the statements in the bill of lading, as to what was the actual intake measurement of the timber there. Held, that the effect of the last clause in the bill of lading was to incorporate into that document the clause of the charter-party which provided that freight should be payable on the intake measurement; that the burden of proving what the intake measurement actually was lay upon the plaintiff, who sought to recover back money which he alleged he had paid in excess of what was due; and that, in the absence of such evidence on behalf of the plaintiff, the statement of quantity contained in the bill of lading was primâ facie evidence of the intake measurement of the timber. Freight for the whole round, out and home, was made payable on safe delivery of the homeward cargo, but at so much per ton of the outward cargo delivered in Calcutta. The master was to have a lien on the cargo for freight, &c.; cash not exceeding £800 was to be advanced to the ship in Calcutta on account of freight, but subject to insurance; and £600 was to be advanced by the charterer's acceptance at three months, or in cash under discount, at charterer's option, on the sailing of the vessel from Liverpool, less five per cent. for insurance. The charterer himself loaded the ship, and the master signed a bill of lading which declared the cargo to be shipped by the charterer to be delivered at Calcutta, as the agents of the charterer might direct, unto order or to his assigns, freight to be paid as per charter-party. In the margin of the bill was written, "Received in advance of the within freight, £600 as per charter-party." The £600 had been paid, not in cash, but by the charterer's bill at three months. The charterer became bankrupt and the bill was dishonoured, and the fact of the bankruptcy and dishonour was known in Calcutta when the ship arrived there. On the ship's arrival in Calcutta, J. O. & Co., who were the holders for value of the bill of lading, demanded delivery of the cargo. The master claimed a right of lien, and refused to deliver unless J. O. & Co. would pay the £600 bill which had been dishonoured, and would further advance £800 for the ship's use, and load a homeward cargo, according to the terms of the charter-party. Held, that J. O. & Co. took the bill of lading with notice of the charter-party, but that, under the circumstances, the master had no lien, and was bound to deliver the cargo to J. O. & Co. OGLE v. NASHOLM . Bourke, O. C., 171

22. ——————— Freight, Lien for, on cargo.—Advances on account of freight.—Lien of owners.—Goods were shipped deliverable to the order of the shippers or their assigns. The bill of lading stated that "freight for said goods was to be paid as per charter-party, with average accustomed, reserving lien in full on cargo for full amount as stipulated therein." The charter-party showed "that H. & Co. undertook to supply a full cargo for the ship, and that R. H., agent for the ship, agreed with H. & Co. that the said ship should proceed to London dock, or any other suitable dock, for loading salt at party's option, or so near thereto as she can safely get, to be at all times afloat and in safety, and then load for the charterer's agent a full and complete cargo of salt, not exceeding what the master considers sufficient cargo, which the charterers engage to ship, not exceeding what she can reasonably carry with her stores, provisions, and furniture, and being so loaded shall therewith proceed to Calcutta, or so near thereto as she may safely get, and there deliver as per bills of lading, and on being paid freight at the rate of twenty-three shillings per ton." The freight to be paid thus: "£500 by charterer's acceptance at two months on sailing, less 2½ per cent. insurance; or cash on sailing, less 5 per cent. interest and insurance, at charterer's option, and the balance in cash on delivery as master requires, at current rate of exchange; 2 per cent. commission to charterers in lieu of consignment." Held, that "a sum of money payable before the arrival of the ship at her port of discharge, and payable by the shippers of the goods at the port of shipment, is not freight in the strict legal acceptation of the term, with all the incidents of freight in giving the ship-owner the right of lien, unless it is stipulated for." Here the owners had a lien upon the goods for freight, notwithstanding that the bill of exchange for £500 had been given. THOMAS v. OGLE

23. ——————— Freight, Lien for, on cargo.—Advances on account of freight.—Dishonour of bills.—The captain of a ship has no lien on the cargo in respect of a portion of the freight stipulated to be advanced, and advanced by bills afterwards dishonoured, nor in respect of a portion of the freight stipulated to be advanced at the port of discharge. A lien cannot arise in any case when the master has not a right to retain the goods till the freight is paid. Such advances are not freight, but advances to be made under discount, and upon the security of the captain's bill on the freighter. The master has no lien at law or in equity in respect of breaches of covenants in the charter-party, other than those relating to the payment of freight for goods actually carried. The defendants were owners of a fleet of steam-ships plying periodically along the coasts of British India, by which they undertook to convey for freight parcels of goods for all persons indifferently from and to specified ports. They stipulated in their bills of lading that claims for short delivery should be made at the port of Calcutta only, within one month after delivery, of any portion of the goods entered in the bill of lading. Held, in a suit against defendants for compensation for value of goods short delivered, that this was not an unreasonable stipulation, and that a claim made on the agents of the defendants, who were authorised only to retain the goods, receive freight, and give delivery, was not a sufficient compliance with the condition. Held, also, that defendants were common carriers, though not for the purposes of the Indian Carriers Act, and that their character of carriers continued so long as the goods remained in their hands and undelivered. In 1876 A. and C. sold their shares to the plaintiff. B. and D. protested against the sale as being a dismemberment of a bhag; and the plaintiff was called upon by the Collector, under section 3 of the Act, to deliver the deed to be cancelled, but declined to do so, and applied that the sale should be recognised. By an order the Collector refused to grant his prayer. The plaintiff, therefore, brought a suit to set aside the order. Both the lower Courts rejected his claim. On appeal to the High Court,—Held, confirming the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that the sale to the plaintiff, having been effected after the Bombay Bhagdari Act (V of 1862) had come into force, was void. BOMBAY ACT—1865—I.

1. ———— Revenue survey.—Entry of tenants in Registers.—Landlord and tenant.—The mere entry of the names of the tenants of a khot in the Government registers as occupants under the Revenue Survey Act, No. I (Bombay) of 1865, does not constitute an injury to the landlord of a tangible kind, of which the Civil Courts can take cognizance. The khot's rights as landlord, if they can be established, cannot be prejudiced by any proceeding under the Survey Act, there being nothing in that Act, or the rules framed under it, which affects the rights of subjects of the Government inter se. The utmost benefit which the tenants can derive, as against their landlord, from being entered as occupants under the Act, is a right to claim a deduction of the amount of assessment paid by them direct to the Government. If they deny his title, he can sue them either to establish his title and recover the full rent due to him under his contract with them, or to eject them as holding possession of his lands by a title which they themselves repudiate. After the functions of the latter officers have ceased in a district, the Collector, acting under Act III of 1846, is the proper officer to determine such a dispute, and fix the proper position of the boundary marks. But where a landholder claims to recover from a neighbouring holder land alleged to have been usurped or encroached upon by the latter, the person aggrieved must file his plaint in Court (which in the case of a claim for mere possession may be the Court of the Mamlatdar or the ordinary Civil Court), where the determination of the Collector as to the proper position of the boundary line or marks (although it of itself confers or withdraws no right of possession) affords valuable evidence in adjudicating upon the rights of the parties. XVII of 1827, s. 4, cls. 2 & 3.*—The words in section 25 of Bombay Act I of 1865 confer upon Government no absolute power in all cases to fix any assessment they may please. But that section, as also section 4, clause 2, Regulation XVII of 1827, distinctly limit the power of Government to raise the assessment on land held partially exempt by right. Government, however, may set aside such limitations at their discretion by a Legislative enactment, as provided by clause 3 of the above Regulation. But Government can exercise this power only under "specific" rules. In Bombay Act I of 1865, section 25, no such "specific" rules are to be found as would indicate that the Legislature intended to set aside the provisions of clause 2, section 4, Regulation XVII of 1827, and to enable the revenue officers to ignore all exemptions except those which they may themselves choose to recognise. Where plaintiff had enjoyed "Savai sut" or a remission of one fourth for a period of more than thirty years with respect to lands on which assessment became leviable in 1805 A.D. he was held by the High Court to have established a prescriptive right to such a remission. 2. ——— s. 5, cl. 1, para. 2.—Bombay Act I of 1865.—Building-sites.—Exemption from payment of Government land revenue.—On the 6th April 1836, the Collector of Ahmedabad demised by lease a building-site in that city to the plaintiff's grandfather for a term of ninety-nine years. No rent was reserved by the lease as then presently payable, but it contained a provision that the lessee should pay, in respect of the said site, such land tax as might "fall upon all." The lessee and his heirs held the site from the date of the lease down to 1878 without paying or being required to pay any land tax or rent to Government. In 1878, however, Government levied from the plaintiff R2-11-0 as land revenue assessed on the site. Plaintiff thereupon sued the Collector of Ahmedabad for recovery of the amount, on the ground that the assessment and levy were illegal. Held, that the plaintiff's building-site was exempted from liability to assessment by Bombay Act IV of 1868, section 5, clause 1, paragraph 2, which enactment applied to the case. Held, also, that this exemption was not to continue beyond the term for which the site had been demised by Government, but that on its expiration it would be open to Government to resume the land altogether, or to re-let it on such terms as to assessment, or otherwise, as might be the pleasure of Government. ——— Local cess.—Landlord and tenant.—Fraudulent collection of cess.—The plaintiffs sued to recover back from the defendant the amount levied by him as local cess on certain wanta lands belonging to the plaintiffs, the defendant claiming to be the superior holder of the village in which the lands were situated. The amount was levied by the defendant through the assistance of the mamlatdar under Bombay Act III of 1869, section 8. The defendant contended that, in consequence of a demand from Government, he had paid local cess on the whole of his talooka, including the village in which the plaintiffs' lands were situated, and was therefore entitled, under sections 69 and 70 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), to recover from them the amount which he had paid to Government as a portion of the cess which rateably fell upon their lands. It was found that the defendant was not the proprietor of the lands held by the plaintiffs, and that the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between them; also that defendant paid local cess for the plaintiffs' lands fraudulently and with the intention of thereby making evidence of title to their lands, knowing that he had no lawful or just claim to them. Held, that the defendant was not the superior holder of the lands, within section 8 of Bombay Act III of 1869, and was, therefore, not entitled to the assistance of the revenue officers of Government to recover the cess provided by that section for superior holders as against tenants and occupants, although he might have paid the local cess due on the land in the plaintiffs' possession; and that, consequently, the aid of the mamlatdar was illegally and improperly given to the defendant for the recovery of the amount from the plaintiffs. Held, also, that the defendant was not a person "interested in the payment" of the money made by him to Government within the meaning of section 69 of the Contract Act, assuming that a portion of that sum was demanded by Government in respect of the plaintiffs' wanta lands, and that they were "bound by law to pay" it to Government. Held, further, that the defendant did not "lawfully" make the payment within the meaning of section 70 of the Act, inasmuch as he did so fraudulently and dishonestly. The plaintiff built an "otá" or verandah, and put up a wooden bench in front of his house, which the Municipality of the town ordered to be removed. In a suit by the plaintiff to have this order set aside, the District Court found that the occupant of each house had the right of way across the court, which was used as the means of access to the houses which surrounded it by persons having business with the house-holders. Held, that such limited access by the public was not sufficient to show that the court ceased to be private property, and was converted into a "street" vesting in the Municipality within the meaning of sections 3 and 17 of Bombay District Municipality Act, VI of 1873; and that the Municipality had not any right to interfere with the plaintiff's erection, whatever liability he might have incurred to an action by any of the other house-holders who occupied the court. The Revenue Commissioner, N. D., on behalf of the Government, sanctioned the resolutions on the 2nd of June 1880. Notice of the meeting of the 18th of March 1880 was not served on three of the commissioners, they being absent at the time from Dakor, and no notice specifying the business to be transacted therein was posted up at the kutcherry as required by section 11, clause 1 of the Act. K., a householder, sent a notice to the Municipality on the 25th of January 1881, impeaching the legality of the tax. ——— Prescriptive right.—Title by long possession.—The holder of a cocoanut cart in Bandora, in the island of Salsette, in the Thanna district, paying an annual assessment of R39 to Government, built a bungalow upon it without the permission of the Collector, who, under the rule purporting to have been issued by the Government of Bombay on the 1st February 1869 in accordance with the provisions of section 35 of Bombay Act I of 1865, demanded from him a fine equal to sixty times the assessment, and on the plaintiff's failure to pay the fine, summarily attached the land under the provisions of section 48 of that Act. Held that, by virtue of uninterrupted enjoyment for more than thirty years, the plaintiff had, under section 1 of Regulation V of 1827, acquired a prescriptive title to the land, and had become its absolute proprietor. ——— Abkari.—Land revenue.—Toddy spirit.—Bombay Abkari Act, No. V of 1878, ss. 24, 29, 54, and 67.—Land Revenue Code, Bombay Act No. V of 1879, s. 87.—Reg. XXI of 1827, s. 60.— The plaintiff sued to recover from the defendant, a farmer of abkari duties on the manufacture of spirits, under section 60 of Bombay Regulation XXI of 1827, a sum of money alleged to have been illegally levied by him as tax or rent through the mamlatdar in respect of certain cocoanut trees tapped by the plaintiff in 1877-78 and 1878-79. Held, that the Civil Courts have jurisdiction to entertain such a suit. claim be held to be one in respect of land revenue, it falls within the exception contained in clause (c) of section 5 of Act X of 1876. If it is not, section 4 of the Act has no application. Per BIRDWOOD, J.—The expression "land revenue," as used in Act X of 1876, does not include either the duties leviable, under Regulation XXI of 1827, on the manufacture of spirits, or the taxes on the tapping of toddy trees, the levy of which in certain districts was legalised by section 24 of the Bombay Abkari Act, No. V of 1878. A farmer of duties on the manufacture of spirits is not authorized to levy a duty on any juice in trees, either under Regulation XXI of 1827, or Act X of 1876, or Bombay Act V of 1878. Juice in toddy-producing trees is not spirit, which includes toddy in a fermented state only. NARAYAN VENKU KALGUTKAR v. SAKHARAM NAGU KOREGAUMKAR [I. L. R., 9 Bom., 462

3. ——— Bond with collateral agreement to accept rents.—Right of suit.—In a suit to recover money (principal and interest) alleged to have been due on a bond, defendant pleaded that subsequent to the execution of the bond plaintiff had taken from the obligor an ijara and a dur-ijara and executed ijara-kabuliats, agreeing to accept payment of the bond by setting off the rents due under the kabuliats. It was found that the kabuliats stipulated that during their term the rent should, year after year, and instalment by instalment, be credited in payment of the bond debt, and that at the end of the term of the ijara, accounts should be settled and the balance paid, neither party being at liberty to put an end to the lease. Held, that till the termination of the lease plaintiff could not sue on the bond, his right of suit having been suspended during the continuance of the ijara and dur-ijara, the stipulations in which qualified the stipulation in the bond for absolute payment at the end of a specified period. While in the enjoyment of the estate the bond-holders brought a suit against him to realise the debt and obtained a decree. Under the decree the obligees sought to sell the property which by the time of the execution had come into the hands of R. (a great-nephew of J.'s), who sued and eventually succeeded in having J.'s adoption declared void. R. then sued to set aside, so far as it affected him, the decree for the sale of the property, and in this suit also he eventually succeeded. The representative of the original bond-holders then brought a suit against R. to recover the money due on the bond. Held, that plaintiff's right of suit first arose, not from the last decree in favour of R., but from the time when the debt became due under the terms of the bond. The obligor admitted the execution of the bond and that a certain sum was due thereon. Held, on the question whether under these circumstances the obligee was entitled to relief as regards his claim for money, that he was not so entitled, inasmuch as the bond on which his suit was brought must be discarded, being a forgery, and therefore the suit as brought failed. I shall not lay any claim to any payment made except in this way,"—Held that, though the defendant at the time of the adjustment disputed the correctness of the account, yet that, by having executed the bond and made payments under it, he must be held to have waived his objection, and in a suit on the bond could not be permitted to reopen the question of the correctness of the balance, though he might possibly have been allowed to do so had he alleged that he had discovered errors in the account after the execution of the bond, and had he specified some of the alleged errors. Held, also, that the stipulation in the bond could not be permitted to control courts of justice as to the evidence which, keeping within the rules of the general law of evidence in this country, they may admit of payments; and the Anglo-Indian law of evidence not excluding oral evidence of payments, it would be against good conscience and the policy of the law to reject it, though the absence of indorsements is a circumstance of some importance, which ought not to be overlooked, but is by no means conclusive. Bekana Tatiah v. *Vasuntum Chinna, Mad. 18. ———— Fraud.—Undue influence and threats.—The three childless widows of a zemindar instituted a suit against the rightful heir to their husband's estate, in which they unsuccessfully disputed his legitimacy. Previously thereto they had obtained advances of money from the present plaintiff, and executed in his favour an agreement and a bond, whereby they secured to him the payment of large sums in case they recovered their husband's estate, and virtually gave to him the entire control of their suit. Subsequently they agreed with the rightful heir to compromise the suit, which compromise, however, was never acted upon, partly owing, it was alleged, to the subsequent conduct of the heir. At the date of the compromise, the heir, who had just attained his majority, and was without proper counsel or assistance, and acted under threats from the plaintiff, a powerful and wealthy banker, that he would carry on the litigation against him per fas aut nefas, was induced, contrary to his own judgment and sense of right, and without any evidence that the sum claimed was really due to the plaintiff, to execute a bond in his favour, whereby he bound himself to pay a large sum of money claimed by the plaintiff as being due from the widows; the plaintiff on his part agreeing that he would treat such payment as a satisfaction of his claim against the widows, but, meanwhile, that he would retain the securities which he held from them. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the heir to enforce the last-mentioned bond,—Held, that the bond was wholly invalid and fraudulent as against the defendant, and that as there was no privity of contract between the plaintiff and defendant independently of the bond, it could not stand as a security for anything which might be justly due from the widows. Semble, —The transaction, even if valid, did not amount to a novation; for the plaintiff never abandoned his claim against the widows, but only agreed to abandon his remedy against them in case he obtained satisfaction of his claim from the heir. 26. ——— Waiver of default.—Limitation.—Suit brought on 24th April 1873 for principal and interest due on a bond dated 30th October 1850. The debt was payable by eight annual instalments, on failure of any one of which the whole amount was to be payable on demand. No instalment was paid, and when the suit was brought defendant pleaded that the suit was barred, as three years had elapsed from the date on which the last instalment became due. Held, that the usual clause, that on failure to pay one instalment the whole amount shall be payable on demand, gave a mere election to plaintiff of converting the obligation into a different one; that that election was never exercised, and that the document continued one securing the payment of a debt by instalments, as to all of which the action had long been barred; and that it was unnecessary, therefore, to consider whether, in the present case, "on demand" must not be construed according to its meaning at the period at which the words were written. The obligee may waive the default under Acts IX of 1871 and XV of 1877, schedule II, article 75, but the Courts have no authority to compel him to waive it. Neither Act VIII of 1859, section 194, nor Act X of 1877, section 210, confers any authority on the Courts to relieve a contracting party from such an express stipulation in a bond payable by instalments as to the consequence of default in punctual payment of the instalments. A debt being presently due, an agreement to pay it by instalments, with a stipulation that on default the creditor may demand immediate payment of the whole balance due with interest, is not to be relieved against in equity. Such a stipulation is not in the nature of a penalty, inasmuch as its object is only to secure payment in a particular manner. The defendant executed to the plaintiff a bond payable by instalments, and expressly stipulating for the payment of the whole amount on failure to pay any instalment on the day fixed. He paid the first instalment, but made default in paying the second, which fell due on the 3rd August 1878. On the 20th August plaintiff sued to recover the whole balance due on the bond. Defendant admitted the bond, but pleaded tender of the amount of the second instalment soon after the due date, and prayed for payment by instalments without any interest. The first Court passed a decree in the plaintiff's favour for the amount claimed with costs, but ordered defendant to pay ₹100 and the costs at once, and the balance by yearly instalments of ₹100 each, with interest at six per cent. till payment. The District Judge, on appeal, affirmed the decree, with a slight variation as to interest, which he directed the defendant to pay on overdue instalments only. Held by the High Court, on second appeal, that neither of the lower Courts had jurisdiction, without the consent of the parties, to substitute, for the contract made by them, terms which the Court preferred. Held, also, that plaintiff was entitled to sue on the day after that on which the default was made,—viz., on the day after that fixed for the payment of the instalment,—and that the Subordinate Judge had no power to rule the contrary. obligee of a bond, by which obligor covenanted to pay the sum of ₹3,800 by annual instalments of ₹200, and in which it was also agreed that payments of the instalments should be indorsed on the bond, brought a suit against the obligor alleging default in payment, and claiming to recover the amount of the bond. He gave credit for payment of the instalments for seven years, and alleged that his cause of action arose upon default in payment of the eighth instalment. The bond showed on its face indorsements of the payments for which credit was given. The obligor alleged that no instalments were paid after the third year, that therefore the debt became due at an earlier date than that stated by the plaintiff, and that the claim was barred by limitation. Held, that inasmuch as the defendant adduced no evidence to show that the later instalments were not paid, and inasmuch as the evidence produced by the plaintiff did not show that the debt accrued at a date earlier than the limitation period, the plea of limitation failed. On the completion of the voyage, the charterer got the ship arrested and sold, and the money was brought into Court. Before any order had been made for the payment of the proceeds out of Court, the master also had got the ship arrested at his suit for wages due, but no decree had been obtained. Subsequently the charterer, without notice to the master, obtained an order of Court for the payment of the proceeds of sale to satisfy his bottomry-bond. Thereupon the master applied to restrain the charterer from taking the money out of Court until the claim for wages had been first satisfied. Held, that the master had a lien on the proceeds for wages due to him at the time of the sale of the ship, prior to that of the bottomry-bond-holder, and that he was entitled to have the proceeds retained in Court until the hearing of his claim. While at Jedda, the master found it necessary to borrow money for the wages of the crew and other purposes; and with the consent of the owner, tenders were invited by advertisement for a sum for which a bottomry-bond was to be given. Several tenders were made, and one by the charterer of the ship was accepted. A bottomry-bond was executed by the master, with the consent of the owner, in which was included the expense of certain repairs which had been found necessary at an intermediate port on the voyage from Calcutta, and for which the master had made himself liable. By the bond the master bound himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, for the payment of the sum named therein, and part of the consideration was expressed to be the payment of the debt which the master had incurred at the intermediate port. On arriving in the Hooghly, the ship was taken in charge by a pilot, under whose advice the master engaged a steamer to tow her to Calcutta. He was sued in Calcutta for the hire of the steamer, and had to pay the claim. When the ship arrived in Calcutta, the bond-holder obtained a decree on his bond, and had the ship arrested and sold; but on the application of the master, who had put in a claim for wages, the Court ordered that the proceeeds should remain in Court pending the consideration of the master's claim. In a suit by the master to recover the balance of wages due to him as master of the ship, and for the expense of the steamer which towed the ship up the river to Calcutta,—Held, the towage was a disbursement fairly made, and of which the bond-holder had the benefit; the master, therefore, had a lien on the ship for such disbursement. Semble,—The master also had a lien for wages down to the time when he was duly discharged, and not merely down to the time of the arrival in port and arrest of the ship. The master, however, having bound himself by the terms of the bond, was precluded thereby from setting up his lien against that of the bond-holder, to whom, on the face of the bond, he had constituted himself a debtor. 1. ——— Demarcation of boundary line.—Beng. Reg. X of 1822, ss. 2, 3, and 8.—Suit for declaration of boundary contrary to survey award.—Proprietary rights, Exercise of.—Presumption of ownership.—Beng. Reg. XI of 1825, s. 5, cl. 12.—At the time of the Permanent Settlement the northern boundary of the pergunnah Shoosung (situated in Mymensingh, at the foot of the Garrow hills) was not defined by Government. From before that time, and certainly for more than sixty years, the zemindars of the pergunnah have always, but in an irregular and uncertain manner, exercised certain rights in the Garrow hills and over the inhabitants, who are half savages, such as hunting elephants, cutting wood, levying cesses on the inhabitants when possible (including in some parts of the hills a tribute of one rupee per hut), and exacting occasional services from them. Government held a survey, and declared the northern boundary of pergunnah Shoosung to be a line running along the base of the Garrow hills. The zemindar thereupon sued to set aside the survey, and for a declaration that the northern boundary lay many miles further north, and that the intermediate hill country belonged to him as forming part of pergunnah Shoosung. Held (by SETON-KARR, J.), that the acts of possession proved by the zemindar were sufficient under the circumstances to prove his proprietary right in the disputed tract, and for the passing of a decree in his favour. Held (by MACPHERSON, J.), that they were not sufficient to entitle him to a decree, being acts of mere easement independent of possession. Held by PEACOCK, C. J., JACKSON and PHEAR, JJ., on appeal under the Letters Patent.—The rules laid down by Regulation X of 1802 were intended to take effect only within the tract of country described in section 2, within which the administration of civil and criminal justice, &c., was by section 3 declared to be vested in an officer to be denominated the Civil Commissioner of the north-eastern parts of Rungpore.

The proviso in section 8 was not intended to give substantive powers to the Governor General in Council in respect of other tracts of the country, and clause 2 of the same section did not intend to take away the power of any Civil Court except within that tract. The proviso contained in section 8 does not authorise Government to separate any part of the Garrow country beyond that described in section 2 from the district and from the general Regulations, but merely directs the separation of such tracts from the estates of the neighbouring zemindars, and the discontinuance of the collection of cesses by the zemindars from the Garrows. By clause 2, section 8, the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts is taken away only in respect of acts of the above description, done under the authority of the Government; but that does not take away the right of a zemindar to contest a survey award drawing a line which deprives him of part of his zemindari and his permanently-settled estate. Where a Rajah had exercised rights and collected dues on certain hills and in forests north of an alleged line, and it was the unanimous opinion of all the revenue authorities that the forests were within his permanently-settled estate, the assumption by them and Government of such line as the boundary of the Rajah's estate, throwing upon him the onus of proving his claim to any portion north of that line, was held to be arbitrary and anomalous. If such proceedings were adopted under clause 12, section 5, Regulation IX of 1825, they were wholly irregular, and the irregularity can be no ground for excluding the Court from examining them. When a man is found exercising, on both sides of a boundary line, without objection, rights of ownership or incorporeal rights, and when it is not shown that there is any other owner of the soil, or that any objection to the exercise of such rights was made during a long course of years, his acts cannot be treated as the encroachments of a wrong-doer. Per PHEAR, J.—Where acts of user illustrate all the modes of enjoyment of which a disputed property can reasonably be expected to be capable, it can be rightly attributed to proprietorship of the tract upon which they were exercised. The plaintiff and defendants were lessees of adjoining pieces of land under agreements made between them respectively and the Secretary of State for

India in Council as lessor. The terms and conditions of the two agreements were the same. By these agreements the plaintiff and defendant respectively agreed to build houses upon the said pieces of land in the manner therein specified, and the agreements contained the two following clauses: (1) "The buildings to be continuous with party walls common to both adjoining houses." (2) "All disputes regarding the cost and maintenance of party walls to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose decision shall be binding on both parties." In pursuance of the said agreements the plaintiff and defendants respectively erected buildings on the said pieces of land. The plaintiff caused the northern wall of his building to be built as a party wall, and it was used by the defendants as the southern wall of the building erected by them. The defendants paid the builder who was employed by the plaintiff a sum of R700 on account of the cost of erecting the party wall, but the rest of the cost was defrayed by the plaintiff. The party wall was completed in November 1871, but, in consequence of disputes which arose between the plaintiff and the building contractor, the sum payable to the latter was not ascertained for some years. In March 1879 the plaintiff caused the party wall to be measured by a surveyor, and on the 7th June 1879 demanded from the defendants payment of half the cost. The defendants, however, failing to pay the sum demanded, the plaintiff, after notice to the defendants, caused the cost of the said party wall to be ascertained by the Government surveyor, who, by a certificate dated the 25th February 1882, certified that the share of the cost to be borne by the defendants for the said party wall was R3,226. The plaintiff in this action sought to recover this sum from the defendants minus the R700 which, as above stated, the defendants had already paid, and for which the plaintiff gave them credit. The defendants in their written statement alleged that the party wall had been partly built with materials supplied by them, and that in the year 1870 they had adjusted accounts with the plaintiff in respect of the said materials and the said party wall, and it was then agreed that the sum of R700 paid by the defendants should be treated as a final settlement. They also alleged that the plaintiff had settled disputes with the building contractors, and had only paid them three annas in the rupee on the amount of their claim in full satisfaction; the defendants pleaded that they ought not to be charged with more than their due proportion of such reduced amount. It was further contended for the defendants that their obligation to pay half the cost of the party wall existed independently of the arrangement between them and the plaintiff to refer the matter to the Government surveyor; that this latter covenant was only collateral, and did not interfere with the plaintiff's right to sue the defendants for their half share of the cost; that the plaintiff's cause of action in this respect arose on the 15th October 1878, when the contractor's claim was finally settled, and that this suit not having been brought for more than three years after that date it was barred by limitation. Held, that the suit was not barred. There was no right of action independently of the valuation and award of the Government surveyor. There was no separate covenant to pay compensation to which the covenant for reference to the Government surveyor could be collateral. The rights of the parties were defined by the contracts, and, under these, each lessee might have the benefit of a party wall on such terms, and no others, as he on his part submitted to. Payment of a share of the cost was not one of those terms except in so far as each lessee, if a dispute arose, was bound by the decision of a Government surveyor. That decision was not ancillary, serving to give greater explicitness to a right already fully subsisting. It was essential to the right itself, and until it was made, no cause of action for the moiety of the cost arose. Where, in leases granted by one lessor to several lessees taking sites for buildings intended to be contiguous and to form one block or group in mutual relation, there is a common covenant which is an inducement to the lessee to take the lease, and which he must know is equally an inducement to his neighbour to take his lease, neither can be called a stranger to the consideration. Each may be regarded as an equitable assignee of the covenants which the lessor made for his benefit as lessee. Each, consequently, has an equitable right to enforce against the other the obligation stipulated for in his interest, and serving as a part of his inducement (as the other knew) to the contract. BUILDINGS ERECTED BY ADJOINING OWNERS.

——— Liability of adjoining owners for costs of party wall.—Agreements for building.—Decision of Government surveyor made final in case of dispute.—Right of suit.—Right of one owner over portion of party wall not used or built on by the other.—Under separate agreements made by them respectively with Government, the plaintiff and defendant held adjoining plots of land for building. The agreements contained the same terms and stipulations, among which were the following: "(a) The buildings to be continuous, with party walls common to both adjoining houses. (b) All disputes regarding the cost and maintenance of party walls to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose decision shall be binding on both parties." The plaintiff employed a contractor to erect a house upon his plot of land. The house was completed in 1870; the north wall of which was built as a party wall in pursuance of the condition contained in the agreement with Government. Disputes subsequently arose between the plaintiff and his contractor, which were not settled until the 26th August 1878, on which date the plaintiff paid the contractor a sum of R20,515-4-11, which included the cost of the party wall. After the plaintiff's house had been completed, the defendant built his house upon the adjoining land, and in so doing he used a large portion of the party wall as the southern wall of his house. He paid the plaintiff half the cost of the portion so used by him. The rear portion of the said wall was not used by the defendant, as his house did not extend so far to the rear as the house of the plaintiff. The plaintiff demanded payment of half the cost of that part of the wall not used by the defendants, but the defendants refused to pay. The plaintiff then claimed that part of the wall as his own property, and proceeded to open windows in it. The defendants objected. The plaintiff subsequently filed the present suit, claiming from the defendants payment of half the cost of the said portion of the wall not used by the defendants, and, in the event of such payment not being awarded, he prayed for a declaration that he was the sole owner of the said portion of the wall, and for an injunction restraining the defendants from disturbing him in the sole enjoyment thereof. The brother (Khatáv Luddha) of the first defendant was originally made the second defendant of the suit. He, however, disclaimed all interest in the premises; and it appeared that in 1876 the first defendant had sold the property to him (Khatáv Luddha), who in 1879 sold it to Kesserbái, the first defendant's wife. Kesserbái accordingly was made the second defendant in the place of Khatáv Luddha. Both the defendants pleaded limitation, and denied their liability to pay any part of the cost of that part of the wall which they did not use. The first defendant further alleged that he had paid the whole cost of the foundation and other parts of the said wall, and claimed to set off this payment against the claim of the plaintiff. At the original hearing, SCOTT, J., held, (1) that the part of the wall in dispute, although not used by the defendants, was a party wall, having regard to the terms of the agreement under which the said wall was erected; (2) that Kesserbái was liable, equally with the first defendant, to pay for this part of the wall, having purchased the property subject to the terms of the original agreement of which she presumably had notice; (3) that the suit was not barred, but that there was no right of action for the cost of the party wall independently of the award of the Government surveyor, in whose decision lay all disputes as to such cost; and that, until his decision was given, there was no complete cause of action. SCOTT, J., accordingly, on 11th December 1882, decreed that the defendants were severally liable to pay the half of whatever sum the Government surveyor might certify to be due for the cost of the disputed part of the said wall, and that the defendants were entitled to set off, in the calculation of what was due from them, the cost of any work or materials which the Government surveyor might find had been contributed by the first defendant. The case was thereupon adjourned, in order that the certificate of the Government surveyor might be obtained. The Government surveyor subsequently gave his certificate as to the cost of the unused portion of the said wall, but stated that on the evidence before him he was unable to decide as to the ownership of the foundations, &c., of the wall. The case came on again before SCOTT, J., who decided to take evidence on the points left undetermined by the Government surveyor. Witnesses were accordingly examined, and on 11th December 1883 the Court disallowed the defendant's claim of set-off, and gave judgment for the plaintiff for half the sum certified by the Government surveyor as the cost of the disputed part of the wall. The defendants appealed. Held that, having regard to the terms of the agreements under which the plaintiff and defendants respectively held their property, the Court was not competent to determine the question of the defendant's set-off or the other points raised by the pleadings. These were matters to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose certificate was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to sue, and upon which the Court might give judgment. Held, also, that the plaintiff was not entitled to use the portion of the wall not occupied by the defendants in any way except as a party wall. It was erected under the agreement as a party wall, and that it should be used for a purpose inconsistent with the idea of its being a party wall would be opposed to the true intention of the parties to the agreement, whether Government or the lessees. The plaintiff was not entitled to the full right of ownership over it, as if it had been built on his own ground: the declaration and injunction asked for, therefore, were refused. BURMA CIVIL COURTS ACT, XVII OF 1875, s. 4.

——— Buddhist law of marriage in British Burma.—Wife's claim upon husband for maintenance.—By the Buddhist law of marriage, as administered in the Courts of British Burma, it is the duty of the husband to provide subsistence for his wife and to furnish her with suitable clothes and ornaments. If he fails to do so, he is liable to pay debts contracted by her for necessaries; but it appears that this law would not be applicable where she has sufficient means of her own. No authority has been found for saying that, where the wife has maintained herself, she can sue her husband for maintenance for the period during which she has done so. A wife married according to Burmese rights and customs claimed from her husband, in a Court in British Burma, a certain sum for her expenses of necessaries and living for a past period during which she had maintained herself. Held, that this was a question "regarding marriage" within the meaning of the Burma Courts Act, XVII of 1875, section 4, and that, therefore, the Buddhist law formed the rule of decision. The law, as stated above, was accordingly applicable. Semble,—That if this had been a case in which, by the above Act, a Court would have had to act according to the rule of justice, equity, and good conscience, there would have been no ground for making the husband liable upon this claim, regard being had to the Burmese law as to the property of married persons. ——— ss. 151, 226, 229, & 230.—Liability of Justices for compensation for damage in making sewers, &c.—Negligence.—Amount of damages.—Writ of mandamus.—By section 151, Bengal Act VI of 1863, the Justices are empowered in making any main or sewers for the drainage of Calcutta, "to carry such sewers through, across, or under any street, or any place laid out as, or intended for, a street, or any cellar or vault which may be under any of the streets, and (after reasonable notice in writing in that behalf) into, through, or under any enclosed or other land whatsoever, making full compensation for any damage done thereby; and if any dispute shall arise touching the amount or apportionment of such compensation, the same shall be settled in the manner hereinafter provided for the settlement of disputes respectiug damages and expenses." Section 229 provides that "in all cases where any damages, costs, or expenses are by this Act directed to be paid, the amount of the same, in case of dispute, shall be ascertained and determined by a Judge of the Calcutta Court of Small Causes." Section 226 provides that a month's notice shall be given before any action is brought under the Act against the Justices. By Act V of 1857 the Oriental Gas Company was empowered to lay down pipes and execute other necessary works for the supply of gas to Calcutta. In an application by the Company for a writ of mandamus to compel the Justices to join with the Company in referring to a Judge of the Small Cause Court to ascertain the amount payable to the Company as compensation for damage alleged to have been occasioned to their pipes, &c., by the drainage works of the Justices, an affidavit was filed, in which the Company's manager stated specifically the loss that had been occasioned, and that he had, on personal inspection, satisfied himself that the loss was occasioned by the negligent execution of the drainage works of the Justices. The affidavit on behalf of the Justices stated that, "in carrying out such drainage works, the Justices, or their contractors, agents, or servants, have not damaged the pipes, &c., of the Company, and that the Justices deny that they are in any manner liable for the damage in respect of which compensation is sought by the Company, or that they have done or caused any damage to the Company." Held (per PHEAR, J.), on the facts, that the Justices' works had caused damage to the Company's main and pipes. Held, also, that the compensation-clause of section 151, Bengal Act VI of 1863, makes the Justices liable to compensate owners of land, or of any interest in land through which the drainage works are authorized to be carried, for any damage caused by any proceedings in such works. It applies to cases where the works have been done with due care and skill, and where, but for the Act, there would have been a right of action against the Justices. Held, also, that the denial of liability by the Justices was simply a general denial that any damage had been done to the Company; the question, therefore, between the parties resolved itself into a dispute as to the amount of damage, which, by section 151, must be settled in the manner provided by section 229. Hence the Company was entitled to a writ of mandamus. Held, also, that section 226 applies to proceedings dehors the Act, and not to proceedings taken to enforce compliance with the provisions of the Act. In support of a rule nisi for a certiorari for bringing up the order that it might be quashed, it was argued that the Chairman had not, as such, jurisdiction to make the order; and that it was invalid, as notice had not been given, and the proceedings had not been reduced to writing. Cause was shown that the description of the Chairman was immaterial, as he was also a Justice of the Peace, and that such summary proceedings were necessary for the public safety. Held, that the Act does not empower the Chairman of the Justices, as such, to issue a warrant under the 200th section; that such a warrant must show, on the face of it, that the Justice issuing it had jurisdiction; that the application under section 200 must be reduced to writing; that the evidence taken therefrom must be recorded; and that notice must be given to the party proceeded against. Under the Military Regulations relating to such grants, such a grant could not be resumed by the Government without a month's notice, and without the payment of the value of such buildings which might have been authorised to be erected. The land was subsequently resumed by the civil authorities, and, the land being within municipal limits, the ground-rents on it were assigned to the Municipality. The Municipal Committee having demanded ground-rent in respect of the buildings erected on such land under such grant, from the representative in title of the original grantee, and the latter having refused to pay the same or to vacate the land, the Secretary of State for India in Council sued him in the Civil Court for a declaration of proprietary right to the land, for its assessment to ground-rent, and, in the event of the refusal of the defendant to pay such rent, when fixed, for his ejectment therefrom, and for mesne profits of the land for six years. The cause of action was stated in the plaint to be the refusal of the defendant to pay ground-rent or to accept a lease or to surrender the land, after a notice to that effect had been issued to him by the Municipal Committee as the plaintiff's agents. Held, that the Municipal Committee were the plaintiff's duly authorised agents to lease and obtain rent for the land occupied by the defendant's buildings with their compounds; that such notice was properly issued in that character on behalf of the plaintiff; and that the defendant's subsequent refusal to pay rent, or to accept a lease or evacuate the premises, amounted to a sufficient denial of the plaintiff's title to afford him a good cause of action; that, assuming that no agreement to pay rent existed, the plaintiff was entitled to demand and recover reasonable compensation for the use and occupation of the land by the defendant; that the suit was maintainable in the Civil Court, and it had power to grant the plaintiff the reliefs sought; that by the conditions of the grant by the military authorities the plaintiff was not disqualified from demanding ground-rent for the land before he had paid the defendant the value of the buildings, but that, looking to those conditions, it would not be fair or equitable to grant the plaintiff a decree, pure and simple, for the ejectment of the defendant, but he should be put under the condition that if, in case of the defendant's refusal to pay the rent fixed, he desired to eject him, the value of the buildings as cantonment residences must first be determined, and when determined must be tendered to the defendant, and if the latter refused to accept it, the plaintiff would then be entitled to eject him. 2. ——— Time for delivery of goods.—Lien for carriage of goods.—Although a carrier may not be bound to deliver goods on any specific day, or within any specific time, he is bound to deliver them within reasonable time, and what constitutes reasonable time must be determined upon the consideration of all the circumstances of the case. A carrier is entitled to his freight and charges, and he is entitled to retain the goods in satisfaction of his lien upon them. BULDEO DASS v. NATHOOMULL [2 Agra, 132

3. ——— Delivery of goods to carrier at consignor's risk.—Delivery to consignee.—So long as goods, though delivered to a common carrier appointed by the consignee, remain at the risk of the consignor, they are not delivered to the consignee. WINTER v. WAY . . 1 Mad., 200

4. ——— Delivery of goods carried by sea.—Landing goods.—Custom of port of Bombay.—Possession of goods.—A carrier by sea is obliged to make an actual delivery of goods carried by him to the consignee, but such primâ facie obligation may be affected by the custom of the port where the goods are to be delivered. Neither by the custom of the port of Bombay nor by the provisions of the Customs Act is the master of a ship bound to wait fifteen days before commencing to land his cargo; but within a reasonable time after the arrival of his ship—48 hours in the case of a sailing vessel, and somewhat less in the case of a steamer—he is at liberty to land goods if the consignee has not sent boats for them; and such landing is not unlawful, nor a breach of contract as carrier on the part of the master. The landing of the goods under the above circumstances and setting them apart for the consignee do not constitute a delivery of them to the consignee; but such goods after being so landed continue in the possession of the master as carrier. Course of legislation with reference to the landing of goods on the custom-house wharf reviewed. Quære,—Whether, under the special circumstances of this case, the goods when so landed remained in the custody of the master in his capacity of common carrier or as a warehouseman? Such a person is bound to exercise reasonable and ordinary care in respect of baggage entrusted to him, but is not responsible for any loss which may not arise from the negligence or default of himself or his servants, he not being a common carrier bound to ensure the safe conveyance of the baggage against all risk, save the act of God or the Queen's enemies. He is to be regarded as a bailee for hire, and the fact that he does not deliver the baggage at the end of the journey should be accepted as primâ facie proof that the loss has been occasioned by negligence for which he is responsible, and, consequently, the onus of proof lies on him that reasonable care was exercised by him. 6. ——— Conveyance of goods by Government bullock train.—Post Office Act, XIV of 1866.—Bailee for hire.—Negligence.—Condition.—Goods conveyed by the Government bullock train are not entrusted to the Post Office for conveyance within the meaning of Act XIV of 1866. In respect of the Government bullock train, Government must be regarded as an ordinary bailee for hire, and not as a common carrier. As such bailee, apart from any special condition limiting its liability, it is bound to take ordinary care of goods entrusted to it for conveyance; and if goods are stolen through the negligence of its servants, it is liable to make good the loss to the consignor. But it may, as may any other bailee for hire, limit its liability by conditions, provided those conditions are not repugnant to public policy or positive law. A condition that it will not be responsible for loss occasioned by the negligence of its servants is certainly not repugnant to positive law, nor a condition repugnant to public policy. POSTMASTER OF BAREILLY v. EARLE [3 N. W., 195

7. ——— Suit for damages for negligence.—Onus probandi.—In an action to recover damages for injury caused to the goods by the negligence of the defendant as a common carrier, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to give evidence of such negligence unless the defendant has shown that the injury was occasioned by a cause which was within the exceptions. 8. ——— Passenger's luggage, Loss of.—Negligence.—Conditions indorsed on ticket.—Foreign Steam-ship Company.—Contract Act, s. 151.—In a suit for damages for loss of passenger's luggage by the wreck of a ship belonging to a foreign company, it appeared that the plaintiff had received a ticket in the French language, which on its face stated that it ought to be signed by the passenger, and that it was issued subject to certain conditions on the back. These conditions, among other things, stated that the company would not be responsible for loss or damage arising from accidents or risks of the sea; that the ticket was delivered subject to the conditions that certain articles of a specified nature should be made the subject of a special declaration, in default of which the company would not be liable; that the company would not be answerable for unregistered luggage; and that luggage might be insured at any of the company's offices. It was not stated where registration of luggage might be effected. The ticket was not signed by the plaintiff. The plaintiff alleged that he did not understand the French language, and that the conditions had not been explained to him by any person. Held, that the company being a foreign company were not common carriers; that the plaintiff was bound by the clauses and conditions on the back of the passage-ticket; that none of the conditions had the effect of relieving the company from the consequences of their own negligence; that, in order to establish a defence upon the ground that the plaintiff's luggage was not registered, it was necessary for the defendants to prove, not only that the plaintiff was bound by the conditions, but also that they were ready and willing to register the plaintiff's luggage, and that the plaintiff did not in fact register it; that as the contract was made in Calcutta, the defendants were bound by the provisions of section 151 of the Indian Contract Act. 9. ——— Special contract.—Railway Act (IV of 1879), s. 10.—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 151, 161.—Railway Company.—The plaintiff despatched certain goods by the East Indian Railway Company for carriage to A., and signed a special contract, in conformity with the form approved by the Governor General in Council "under section 10 of Act IV of 1879, holding the Company harmless and free from all responsibility in regard to any loss, destruction, or deterioration of, or damage to, the said consignment from any cause whatever, before, during, and after transit over the said Railway or other Railway lines working in connection therewith." The goods were short delivered, and the plaintiff brought a suit to recover the value. Held, per GARTH, C. J., PRINSEP, J., and WILSON, J., that the Railway Company could not be held liable to account to the consignee for any loss from any cause whatever during the whole time that the goods were under their charge, inasmuch as the plaintiff had entered into a special contract to hold them harmless in accordance with section 10 of Act IV of 1879. Held, per O'KINEALY, J., that it was doubtful whether sections 151 and 161 of the Contract Act applied to carriers by rail; but even assuming that these sections did not apply, the Railway Company would be in the position of carriers before the passing of the Carriers Act, and were entitled to protect themselves from liability by special contract. the Carriers Act, III of 1865, certain goods which were lost in the course of their carriage on one of the defendants' steamers. On the facts it was found that the defendants took as much care of the goods as a man of ordinary prudence would under similar circumstances take of his own goods of the same bulk, quality, and value as the goods bailed; and that the loss was not occasioned by the act of God or the Queen's enemies. There was no special contract of the nature provided for by section 6, Act III of 1865. Held, that sections 151, 152, of the Contract Act did not apply, and that the defendants were liable for the loss of the goods. 7. ——— Act XIX of 1841.—Summary procedure.—Act XXVII of 1860.—A. (a Hindu) died intestate in December 1865, leaving his widow in possession of his property, moveable and immoveable. The descent of A.'s property was admittedly governed by the law of the Mitakshara. On the 19th January 1866, A.'s nephew presented a petition to the Zillah Court, under Act XIX of 1841, denying the title of the widow. Upon this alone the Judge directed the widow to come in and show cause, which she did on the 2nd February following. A daughter of A. on the 19th March presented a petition in opposition to the nephew's claim for possession. The nephew filed a reply. In the meantime the widow applied for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, which was opposed by both nephew and daughter. The nephew also filed a cross-petition under Act XXVII of 1860. All these petitions came on by consent together for adjudication on a state of facts admitted by all parties through their pleaders, who also, by consent between themselves, submitted their view of the question of law to be decided on the Acts of 1841 and 1860. The questions so submitted were—(1) Did it appear on the evidence that there was a separation between A. and his nephew according to the Mitakshara doctrine? (2) If the evidence per se established a legal separation, was such separation negatived by certain admissions of A.? The Judge refused the application of the widow under Act XXVII of 1860, and granted possession to the nephew under Act XIX of 1841. The nephew was a man of substance, and able to bring a regular suit, and there was no evidence of possession by force or fraud on the part of the widow, the only question being her right according to the Mitakshara law. Held, that the Judge was in error in proceeding summarily under Act XIX of 1841 on the declaration of the applicant alone, and without other enquiry; but that this defect was cured by the widow's appearing. That the Judge ought not to have tried the cases under Act XIX of 1841 and Act XXVII of 1860 together and on the same issues; but the Judge having jurisdiction over the subject-matter, and to frame the issues, his order was not open to appeal or review. 8. ——— Object of Act.—Act XXVII of 1860.—Trustee.—The object of Act XXVII of 1860 is not to enable parties to litigate questions of disputed title, but to enable debtors to pay the debts due by them with safety to the representatives of deceased Hindus and others; and to facilitate the collection of such debts by removing all doubts as to the legal title to demand and receive the same. In other words, the objects of the Act are to enable debtors to get sufficient acquittances when they pay money due to the estate of a deceased; and to preserve that

The Court before whom the application was made refused the grant of the certificate, on the ground that sufficient primâ facie evidence existed establishing the validity of the adoption. On appeal, —Held that the Appellate Court, concurring with the opinion expressed by the Court of first instance in respect of the factum of the adoption, would not be justified in setting aside the decision, on the ground that such Court was wrong in entering into and deciding the question as to the validity of the adoption. On an application for the grant of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, which is opposed by a party who alleges he has a preferable title to it, the Court should adjudicate the question of title, with a view to determine which party has the preferential right to the certificate. It subsequently appeared that she was incompetent to manage the property; and the natural father of the minor having applied for a certificate of administration, the lower Court granted one to him. On appeal by the widow to the High Court against the decision of the lower Court,—Held, that the order of the District Judge granting the certificate should be confirmed. The certificate did not alter the rights and interests of the minor or of the widow in the property. 5. ———— Police Act XIII of 1856, s. 111.—Conviction on merits.—Error in decision on merits.—Affidavits, Use of.—Section 111 of the Police Act (XIII of 1856) did not give jurisdiction to the High Court, when a case was brought before it on certiorari, to enquire whether the Magistrate had come to a correct conclusion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner. The object of that section was to limit the objections to a conviction to some substantial meritorious ground, such as want of jurisdiction or the like, and to prevent a conviction from being quashed on a mere error of form or of procedure. But the section did not give the High Court any right to interfere on the ground that the Magistrate had come to a wrong conclusion on the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused person. CESSION OF BRITISH TERRITORY IN INDIA.

1. ——— Evidence of cession.—Transfer or re-arrangement of jurisdiction in British territory.—Statutes 3 and 4 Will. IV., c. 85, s. 43.—Statutes 24 and 25 Vict., c. 67, s. 22.—Statutes 24 and 25 Vict. c. 104, s. 9.—Evidence Act, s. 113.—Effect of cession of territorial jurisdiction.—The power to cede territory was not one of the powers to which the Secretary of State for India in Council succeeded under 21 and 22 Victoria, Cap. 106, when the Government of India was by that statute transferred to Her Majesty, inasmuch as such a power was not possessed by the East India Company. DAMODAR GORDHAN v. GANESH DEORAM . . 10 Bom., 37 in the High Court.

Held, on appeal to the Privy Council, as follows.—Semble,—That the general and abstract doctrine laid down by the High Court at Bombay, that it is beyond the power of the British Crown, without the consent of the Imperial Parliament, to make a cession of territory within the jurisdiction of any of the British Courts in India, in time of peace, to a foreign power, is erroneous. Where an objection is taken to the territorial jurisdiction of a British Court, on the ground that the territory over which the jurisdiction of the Court extended has been ceded to a foreign power, such a cession must be regularly proved, and cannot be established by uncertain inferences from equivocal acts. An agreement on the part of the Government of India purporting to transfer certain villages, forming part of a Regulation province within the Bombay Presidency, and subject to ordinary British jurisdiction, to the extraordinary jurisdiction of the Political Agency of a Native State, does not constitute a cession of territory. A re-arrangement of jurisdiction within British territory in India, by the exclusion of a certain district from the Regulations and Codes there in force, and from the jurisdiction of all the High Courts, with a view to the establishment therein of a Native jurisdiction under British supervision and control, cannot be carried out except by legislation, under the provisions of the Imperial Statutes 3 and 4, William IV., Cap. 85, section 43; 24 and 25 Victoria, Cap. 67, section 22; and 24 and 25 Victoria, Cap. 104, section 9. The Governor General in Council being precluded by the Act 24 and 25 Victoria, Cap. 67, section 22, from legislating directly as to the sovereignty or dominion of the Crown over any part of its territory in India, or as to the allegiance of British subjects, cannot by any legislative Act (e.g., by "The Evidence Act of 1872," section 113) purporting to make a notification in the Government Gazette conclusive evidence of a cession of territory, exclude judicial enquiry as to the nature and lawfulness of that cession. Where the foundation of the jurisdiction of a British Court over the subject-matter of a suit and the parties thereto is territorial, and the territory by a valid cession ceases to be British, the jurisdiction of the Court can no longer be exercised, whatever be the stage or condition of the litigation at the time of such cession. 1. ——— Maintenance.—Void agreement.—Alienation by Hindu widow.—Waste.—A Hindu widow, as the heiress of her husband, sued his four surviving brothers, who retained the enjoyment of the whole joint estate, for the recovery of her share

While the suit was pending, on the 24th April 1859 she entered into an agreement with the defendant G., by which, after reciting the nature of her claim, and stating that she was too poor to prosecute it, she assigned to him all she might be entitled to receive from the joint estate in right of her deceased husband, together with all interest and accumulations thereon, and all advantage to be derived from the suit about to be instituted by the defendant G., and she appointed him her attorney to institute and carry on any suit in her name for recovering her right and share in the property; it being agreed that he should retain one moiety of what might be recovered absolutely for his own benefit as remuneration, and out of the other moiety should repay himself such sums as he might from time to time have advanced or paid for her maintenance, with interest at 12 per cent. per annum, and also all such sums and costs as he might from time to time have advanced or been put to in carrying on the suits, with interest at 12 per cent. per annum, and should pay over the residue to the widow herself. Subsequently that suit was withdrawn. In May 1859, the widow, by G., filed a fresh bill against her husband's surviving brothers for recovery of her husband's share in the estate together with accumulations; and in August 1861 obtained a decree for a large sum of money out of the joint estate—"the whole to be enjoyed by her as a Hindu widow in the manner prescribed by Hindu law." By a deed dated November 14th, 1860, G. assigned his interest under the assignment of April 1859 to H. S., the defendant. In a suit brought on the 22nd February 1866 by the reversionary heirs of the husband, in the Court of the Principal Sudder Ameen of Hooghly, against the widow, G., and H. S., the last one of whom alone resided in Calcutta, which suit was on the 23rd of April 1866 removed into the High Court on the application of G. and H. S., it was prayed that the agreement of April 1859 and all sub-assignments that might have been made be set aside as void, and that the money should be paid into Court and kept there during the life of the widow defendant, for the benefit of the reversionary heirs, and in order to prevent waste. Held by PHEAR, J., the suit being one to prevent contemplated waste, was not barred by lapse of time. The agreement of 4th April 1859 was void as being without definite consideration, and being in the nature of a gambling transaction, not valid against heirs under Hindu law; and it was also void being of a champertous nature, and contrary to public policy. The law which forbids and avoids all acts contrary to public policy, and subversive of the general interests of society, is in force in this country. Independent of the Charter, there is a power inherent in any Court of Justice which receives its authority from the State to make the interests of private persons subordinate to those of the public, and to take care that where they are in conflict, the latter should prevail. Held, on appeal, by PEACOCK, C. J., and MACPHERSON, J., that the suit could be maintained for the relief sought, and for the protection of the property; that the deed of the 4th April 1859, so far as it related to the moiety of the property assigned to the defendant G., absolutely, was not binding on the plaintiffs or on the persons who upon the death of the widow might succeed to the property of her deceased husband. Though not void on the ground of champerty, it was an unconscionable bargain, and a speculative, if not a gambling contract, and there was no necessity for such an alienation by the widow. But so far as regards the assignment of the moiety as security for the advances and expenses which G. or his assigns might reasonably and properly make or incur for the maintenance of the widow, for carrying on the necessary proceedings to enforce her rights, with 12 per cent. interest on such advances, it was not void, but created a charge upon that moiety, which was binding upon the reversionary heirs of the husband to the extent of such advances and expenses. There was legal necessity for such charge, and it affected the moiety both of principal and accumulations. Held, by MACPHERSON, J., the agreement of April 1859 was void by English law as being a mere gambling transaction and contrary to public policy and illegal. 2. ——— Assginment of debutter land in consideration of defendant ejecting by suit, at his own cost, the Brahmins, &c.—A Hindu widow, together with the next heir, joined in assigning to the defendant a debutter estate, in consideration of the defendant conducting, at his own cost, proceedings for the ejection of Brahmins and Banians then in occupation as poojaries to conduct the worship of the idols; and upon the condition that he should thereafter conduct such worship, and out of the proceeds and offerings retain three fourths for his own purposes and for hospitality, and pay the remaining fourth for the maintenance of the widow and the heir. Held that the assignment was valid, the purpose for which the lands were dedicated being provided for; and that although the transaction amounted to champerty, that was no ground for treating it as invalid. An assignment between Hindus of property the subject-matter of litigation, on conditions which constitute champerty, is not on that ground invalid. JADUBINDU ODHIKAREE v. LOKENAUTH GEREE

8. ——— Maintenance.—Application of law of champerty.—Duty of Court.—Specific performance of lease savouring of champerty.—The law of England as to the offences of maintenance and champerty does not apply to natives of India. In dealing with objections to their contracts, on the ground of maintenance and champerty, the Court must look to the general principles regarding public policy and the administration of justice upon which that law at present rests. To constitute "maintenance," improper litigation must have been stirred up with a bad motive for purposes contrary to public policy and justice. "Champerty" is a species of "maintenance" and of the same character, but with the additional feature of a condition or bargain providing for a participation in the subject-matter of the litigation. Specific performance decreed of a lease, though the lease formed part of an arrangement whereby, as a consideration for the lease, the plaintiff was to lend the defendant money to enable him (inter alia) to commence proceedings against the then tenant of the subject-matter of the intended lease. 10. ——— Invalidity of contract on ground of maintenance.—Agreement against public policy.—A commissariat officer named M. had a butler named L., who was employed to put forward with the money of M., or his own, various large contracts. Two accounts were opened in several houses of agency in the names of M. and L. To secure himself, M. caused L. to execute a will leaving his whole estate to M. Testator and legatee perished together in the Persia steam-ship in 1864. The Administrator General of Madras administered to L.'s estate, but the personal representatives of M. contested the right of the Administrator General to pay over the fund to those of L. The result was that L.'s representatives were recommended by their attorney, C., to apply to one J. (the present plaintiff), who was also a client of C.'s, for the necessary funds. J. consented to advance money for the purpose of the suit, and on the 28th July 1869 a so-called deed of mortgage, drawn up by C., was executed between the present defendants as mortgagors and the plaintiff, J., as mortgagee, whereby, in consideration of an advance of the sum of R5,000 (the receipt of R1,800 of which was by the instrument acknowledged) to be made by J. to such attorney as he should select, before the 31st of December 1869, the defendants mortgaged everything which they might be entitled to recover by suit, the mortgage to be defeasible on payment of 50 per cent. of what they might recover by suit, and a further 50 per cent. upon all to which they might be entitled as the persons entitled to L.'s estate. They also covenanted to repay the money lent with interest. The present defendants succeeded in their suit against the Administrator General, and this suit was brought by J. to recover a commission of 50 per cent. on the sum recovered, and the sums advanced, with interest. Defendants denied that plaintiff had fulfilled his part of the agreement, and alleged that in consequence of his neglecting to supply funds they had been compelled to borrow of a third party. They also pleaded that the agreement was void for champerty and maintenance. Held, that by the law of England, which prevailed in the present suit, this contract was clearly void, being contrary to the plain provision of the common and statute law against

She then applied to H. S.; the surplus, after satisfying all such sums, to be paid to K. D. Then K. D., with the aid and under the management of H. S., brought a suit against the plaintiff and other members of the joint family of G. C. C. for a declaration of her rights under the will of his father, R. C., and for the administration of G. C. C.'s share of the joint estate. The result of this suit was that K. D. was (among other things) declared entitled as a Hindu widow to ₹1,01,302-14-10 in respect of the accumulations of the joint property, between the dates of R. C.'s and G. C. C.'s deaths. The plaintiff paid the ₹1,01,302-14-10 into Court, under an order made in the suit. K. D. subsequently obtained an order, under which she took this sum out of Court, notwithstanding that the plaintiff applied for an injunction to restrain her taking it out. Upon her obtaining that order, the plaintiff, as immediate reversionary heir of G. C. C., instituted the present suit against K. D. and H. S., to restrain K. D. from taking the ₹1,01,302-14-10 out of Court, and to compel her to bring back any portion thereof which she might have already received; and for a declaration that the assignment to H. S. created no valid charge thereon. Held (following the decision in the case of Grose v. Amritamayi Dasi, 4 B. L. R., O. C., 1), that the assignment to H. S. was not binding on the reversionary heirs of G. C. C., except as regards the charge on one moiety for expenses incurred and advances made by *H. 18. ——— Bond executed by Hindu widows.—Maintenance.—Fraud.—Undue influence and threats.—The three childless widows of a zemindar instituted a suit against the rightful heir to their husband's estate, in which they unsuccessfully disputed his legitimacy. Previously thereto they had obtained advances of money from the present plaintiff, and executed in his favour an agreement and a bond, whereby they secured to him the payment of large sums in case they recovered their husband's estate, and virtually gave to him the entire control of their suit. Subsequently they agreed with the rightful heir to compromise the suit, which compromise, however, was never acted upon, partly owing, it was alleged, to the subsequent conduct of the heir. At the date of the compromise, the heir, who had just attained his majority, and was without proper counsel or assistance, and acted under threats from the plaintiff, a powerful and wealthy banker, that he would carry on the litigation against him per fas aut nefas, was induced, contrary to his own judgment and sense of right, and without any evidence that the sum claimed was really due to the plaintiff, to execute a bond in his favour, whereby he bound himself to pay a large sum of money claimed by the plaintiff as being due from the widows; the plaintiff on his part agreeing that he would treat such payment as a satisfaction of his claim against the widows, but meanwhile that he would retain the securities which he held from them. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the heir to enforce the last-mentioned bond,—Held, that the bond was wholly invalid and fraudulent as against the defendant, and that as there was no privity of contract between the plaintiff and defendant independently of the bond, it could not stand as a security for anything which might be justly due from the widows. Quære,—Whether the plaintiff could have recovered from the widows, if they had been successful against the heir, the large sums of money secured by their bond and agreement. The law of champerty and maintenance is not the same in India as in England. The English statute with regard to champerty is not applicable in the mofussil in India. The Indian Courts in every transaction must decide upon the fact whether it is merely the acquisition of an interest in the subject of litigation bonâ fide entered into, or whether it is an unfair or illegitimate transaction got up for the purpose merely of spoil, or of litigation, disturbing the peace of families, and carried on from a corrupt or other improper motive. 19. ——— Agreement against public policy.—Maintenance.—Malicious procedure.—Reasonable and probable cause.—Practice.—Security for costs by a person not a party to the suit.—In a deed, dated 17th July 1867, it was recited that A. was entitled to certain property then in possession of D. and E., and that A., and B. her husband, "having no funds to adopt or to commence legal proceedings" for the recovery of the property, had applied to C. to assist them in commencing and conducting the necessary suits and to make all the requisite disbursements connected therewith until their final termination, and that C. had agreed to do so; and also, as A. and B. had "no means whatever," to pay to them or the survivor R150 a month until the final termination of the litigation. Then followed the appointment by A. and B. of C. to be their attorney to institute and prosecute all necessary suits, to sign all papers and documents, to receive all moneys and take possession of all lands, &c., to which A. and B. might become entitled under any decree or order that might be made, and to appoint attorneys and vakeels. C. then covenanted to institute and prosecute the necessary suits, and to make the necessary advances and payments and to pay R150 a month to A. and B. Then it was agreed that out of the moneys or proceeds of lands, &c., recovered, C. should, in the first place, retain and reimburse himself all advances and payments made by him with interest thereon at 12 per cent.; in the second place, retain to himself, by way of remuneration for his trouble and risk, one third of the nett proceeds of the litigation; and, in the third place, make over the remaining two thirds to A. and B. A. and B. covenanted not to intermeddle with C. in prosecuting the litigation, that they would render him all possible assistance, and that the power of attorney given by them to C. should be irrevocable so long as he prosecuted the litigation and paid the monthly allowance of R150. It was provided, however, that if B. wished to devote all his time thereto, he might have the management of the litigation, but under the control of C.; and that A. and B. might revoke the power of attorney on repayment to C. of all money advanced by him with interest at 12 per cent.; and the sum of R2,000 by way of liquidated damages.

A power was also reserved to A. and B. to compromise, but only with the consent of C., unless the sum to be received on the compromise should exceed the total amount of C.'s advances with interest at 12 per cent. In pursuance of this agreement a suit was instituted in the names of A. and B. against D. and E. to recover possession of the property. This suit was by the High Court decreed in the plaintiff's favour, but was, on appeal, dismissed by the Privy Council with costs. While the suit was in the Court of first instance, D. and E. applied to have C. added as a party. This application was refused, and D. and E. did not appeal from that refusal. Pending the litigation, A. and B. brought a suit against D. and E. for wasilat, and obtained a decree. On the 21st September A. and B. executed a memorandum of agreement, whereby C. purchased all their rights in the two suits brought by them against D. and E. D. and E. now brought a suit against C., alleging that they had suffered loss and damage by the litigation instituted by A. and B.; that C. was guilty of champerty and maintenance; that the litigation was commenced and continued maliciously by C. in the names of persons who had no legal or equitable right, and without reasonable or probable cause; that the agreement of 17th July 1867 was illegal and contrary to public policy; that the litigation was carried on by C. at his own expense and for his own benefit; and that C. was the real mover in the proceedings, and illegally used the procedure of the Court to the damage and injury of the plaintiffs. Held, in the Court below and on appeal, that there was reasonable and probable cause for the institution of the wasilat suit brought by A. and B. against D. and E. Held, by MACPHERSON, J., that the agreement of July 1867 was illegal and against public policy, as also were the subsequent institution and maintaining of the suit against D. and E. by C.; and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover from C. the loss they had sustained by reason of the suits which he (substantially only for his own benefit) had maintained against them. Held, on appeal (reversing the decision of the Court below), that the suit was not maintainable. The English statutes with regard to champerty and maintenance do not apply to India. In England, champerty and maintenance were offences punishable by the Common Law; and the ground on which an action is allowed in England,—viz., that C. had been guilty of an offence by which the plaintiff had suffered damage,—does not exist in India. The only ground on which agreements which savour of champerty or maintenance are held to be void in this country is, that they are contrary to public policy. Assuming that the agreement of July 1867 was a valid one, and that C. did thereby acquire an interest in the subject-matter of the suit, and supplied the means of carrying it on, such acts did not entitle the plaintiffs to maintain the present suit, or to recover against C. the costs of the former suit. C. ought to have been made a co-plaintiff with A. and B. in the former suit, or he ought to have been called upon to give security for the costs of that suit. CHUNDERKANT MOOKERJEE v. RAMCOOMAR KOONDOO

In the same case,—Held on appeal to the Privy Council, the English laws of maintenance and champerty are not of force as specific laws in India, either in the mofussil or in the presidency towns. The ground on which contracts of the nature of champerty and maintenance should be held by the Indian Courts to be invalid is that they are contrary to public policy. An agreement to supply funds to carry on a suit in consideration of having a share in the property if recovered is not necessarily opposed to public policy, since cases may easily be supposed in which it would be in furtherance of right and justice that a suitor who had a just title to property, and no means to support it, should be assisted in this way. But agreements purporting to be made to meet such cases, when found to be extortionate and unconscionable, so as to be inequitable, or to be entered into for improper objects, as for the purpose of gambling in litigation or of injuring others by encouraging unrighteous suits, are contrary to public policy, and ought not to have effect given to them. Since by the law of India a champertous agreement does not constitute a punishable offence, an action in that country, founded on alleged champerty, to recover losses and costs incurred in litigation, cannot be sustained on the ground that a remedy by action accrues where an indictable offence has been committed. No action will lie for improperly putting the law in motion in the name of a third party, unless it is alleged and proved that it has been done maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause. In the absence of such proof, an action for losses and costs incurred in defending a suit will not lie as against a person who is alleged to have been a mover in that suit, and to have had an interest in it, but who had not been made a party to the record, since such a state of things creates no legal privity from which a promise can be implied on which an action on contract can be founded, nor does it, ex hypothesi, constitute a legal wrong. 67. ——— Charge, Alteration of.—On the 8th August 1884 a Magistrate of the second class began an enquiry in a case in which several persons were accused of rioting and of voluntarily causing grievous hurt. On the 6th September the powers of a Magistrate of the first class were conferred on the Magistrate by an order of Government, which was communicated to him on the 8th September. On the 9th September, the case for the prosecution having closed, the Magistrate framed charges against each of the accused under sections 323 and 325 of the Penal Code, recorded the statements of the accused and the evidence for the defence, and on the 10th September convicted the accused on all the charges, passing upon each of them, in respect of each charge, sentences which he could pass as a Magistrate of the first class, but could not have passed as a Magistrate of the second class. On appeal, the Sessions Judge, on the ground that the prisoners had committed the offence described in section 148 of the Penal Code, held that the sentences passed by the Magistrate were illegal, as being inconsistent with the provisions of section 71, paragraphs 2 and 4; and he accordingly reduced the sentences of imprisonment which the Magistrate had passed to the maximum of imprisonment which the Magistrate could have inflicted under section 148. Held by the Full Bench (PETHERAM, C. J., that the Judge in this case had no power to alter the charge or to frame a new charge in any way. Per BRODHURST, J., that the sentences passed by the Magistrate were as a whole illegal, and that a Court of Appeal is not competent to alter the finding of a Magistrate so as to convict an accused person of an offence which the Court of which the order is on appeal was not competent to try. abetment generally." On the application of counsel for the prosecution, a charge was then added of "abetment of murder committed by some person or persons unknown." The additional charge was read aloud to the jury, but was not specially explained to the prisoner, nor was he called upon to plead to it. Counsel for the prisoner was asked by the Judge if he desired to have a new trial on the charge as amended, but he declined. The three charges (i.e., the two original charges and the additional charge) were then read to the jury, who after deliberation returned a verdict of "not guilty" on charges Nos. 1 and 2, and of "guilty" on charge No. 3, viz., of abetment of murder by a certain person or persons unknown. On the application of counsel for the prisoner the following points were reserved: (1) whether, under the circumstances the Court had power to add a new charge; (2) whether the verdict returned on the new charge was valid, the prisoner not having been called on to plead to it. Held (SCOTT, J., dissentiente), that the Judge was wrong in framing a new charge in addition to the original charges. The error, however, was one of form and not of substance, and under section 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) the Court declined to interfere with the conviction. Held also that, having regard to sections 228, 229, and 230 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the charge of abetment of murder by B. might have been changed into one of abetment generally. Held also that, in any case, the conviction was good under sections 236 and 237 of the Criminal Procedure Code. It was doubtful whether the evidence would establish the offence of murder, abetment of murder by B., or abetment of murder by some one unknown. Even if there had been no charge properly framed, the Judge might, under section 237, have accepted the verdict returned by the jury and entered it on the record. The fact that the Judge framed a charge which, ex hypothesi, was beyond his authority, and accepted a verdict on that charge, did not affect the legality of the conviction. Held, that the omission to read and explain the charge to the prisoner did not, under the circumstances, prejudice the prisoner, and was, therefore, immaterial. In the Criminal Procedure Code generally the word "charge" is used as the statement of a specific offence, and not as indicating the entire series of offences of which a prisoner is accused. There is nothing in the Code to indicate that the word is to have a different construction in sections 226 and 227 from what it has in other sections. The words "without a charge" in section 226 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) will properly apply, not only to a case in which there is no charge at all, but also to a case in which there is no charge of such an offence as the Sessions Judge or Clerk of the Crown may think the prisoner ought to be tried for. If the word "alter" in section 227 is to be taken to include "addition," as it does in section 226, the addition permitted must be an addition to some specific charge in the nature of an alteration, and not the addition of a new charge. The words "return of the verdict" in section 227 mean the return of the final verdict which the Judge is bound to record. Per SCOTT, J.—The test of the admissibility of proposed amendments to a charge is whether such amendment will prejudice the prisoner. The word "charge" is used in the Code both as indicating the whole series of counts or heads of charge, and also as indicating a charge of one specific offence. In section 227 it is used in the former sense. The word "alter" in section 227 must be taken to be equivalent to the words "add to or otherwise alter" which are used in section 226, and, consequently, the addition of a new "head of charge" is an alteration within the meaning of section 227. 69. ——— Addition of charge triable by any Magistrate.—Power of Sessions Judge to add charge and try it.—Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 226, 236, 237, 537.—Three persons were jointly committed for trial before the Court of Session, two of them being charged with culpable homicide not amounting to murder of J., and the third with abetment of the offence. At the trial, the Sessions Judge added a charge against all the accused of causing hurt to C., and convicted them upon both the original charges and the added charge. The assault upon C. took place either at the same time as or immediately after the attack which resulted in the death of J. Held, that the case did not come within the terms of section 226 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and the adding of the charge was an irregularity which was not covered by sections 236 and 237, those sections having no application to such a state of things; but that inasmuch as the Sessions Judge was addressed by the pleader who appeared for the accused, and heard all the objections raised and witnesses might have been called for the defence upon the added charge, the provisions of section 537 were applicable to the case. Mode of summing up evidence—continued.

Judge in summing up should give a full and detailed statement of the evidence on both sides; he should point out the legal bearing of it, and what weight the jury ought to attach to its several parts. His omission to do so, if the accused is thereby prejudiced, amounts to such an error in law as would justify a Court of Appeal in setting aside the verdict. No general rule can be laid down as to when a prisoner is prejudiced by a defective summing up, but in general, if the finding of the jury in such a case is one that an Appeal Court would set aside if the trial had taken place with the aid of assessors, the Court will interfere and set the verdict aside. CHARITABLE BEQUEST.

See WILL—CONSTRUCTION. [I. L. R., 4 Calc., 443

1. ——— Failure of object.—Cy près performance.—Construction of will.—The doctrine of cy près as applied to charities rests on the view that charity in the abstract is the substance of the gift, and the particular disposition merely the mode, so that, in the eye of the Court, the gift, notwithstanding the particular disposition may not be capable of execution, subsists as a legacy which never fails and cannot lapse. It cannot be laid down as a general principle that the cy près doctrine is displaced where the residuary bequest is to a charity, or that among charities there is anything analogous to the benefit of survivorship, since cases may easily be supposed where the charitable object of the residuary clause is so limited in its scope, or requires so small an amount to satisfy it, that it would be absurd to allow a large fund bequeathed to a particular charity to fall into it. On the failure of a specific charitable bequest, jurisdiction arises to act on the cy près doctrine, whether the residue be given in charity or not, unless upon the construction of the will a direction can be implied that the bequest if it fails should go to the residue. In applying the cy près doctrine, regard may be had to the other objects of the testator's bounty, but primary consideration is to be given to the gift which has failed, and to a search for objects akin to it. The character of a charity as being for the relief of misery in a particular locality may guide the Court in framing a cy près scheme to benefit that locality. Unless the cy près scheme framed by the lower Court be plainly wrong, a Court of Appeal should not interfere with it. MAYOR OF LYONS v. ADVOCATE GENERAL OF BENGAL [I. L. R., 1 Calc., 303: 26 W. 2. ——— Charitable gift.—Cy près doctrine.—Lapse.—Construction of will.—A testator directed his executor to set apart a sum of ₹7,000 to provide a fund for or towards the education of two or more boys at St. Paul's School, Calcutta, such boys to be natives of Calcutta, of poor and indigent parents, or fatherless children of Armenian or other Christian religion. The testator died in 1867. In 1864 the St. Paul's School, Calcutta, was removed to Darjeeling. In the St. Paul's School, Calcutta, the fees for day scholars and day boarders were ₹8 and 10 respectively. In the St. Paul's School, Darjeeling, there were no day scholars nor any day boarders; and the cost of a regular boarder would be about ₹400 per annum. Held, that the gift did not lapse, being a general charitable bequest, and that under the circumstances it must be executed cy près. MALCHUS v. BROUGHTON [I. 1. ———— Nomination of ship's agents by freighters.—Right of agents to sue on charter-party.—Ships "going seeking," Meaning of.—A charter-party made between the defendants (the owners of the Seaforth) and H. & Co. (the freighters) provided that the owners should employ at the ports of discharge the consignee nominated by the freighters to transact the ship business there inwards and outwards on the customary terms, not exceeding 2½ per cent. on amount of freight payable inwards, and 5 per cent. outwards. H. & Co. nominated the plaintiffs to transact the ship's business in Bombay (a port of discharge) with the knowledge and consent of the master of the Seaforth, and the plaintiffs accepted and acted under such nomination. The defendants refused to pay the plaintiffs' commission on the outward freight of the Seaforth, on the ground that, under the circumstances under which such freight was procured, the plaintiffs were not under the charter-party entitled to receive commission on it. Held, that the plaintiffs were sufficiently within the consideration of the charter-party to maintain a suit for the breach of such clauses of it as were inserted for their benefit. 2. ———— Right to retain cargo for amount of bill for freight dishonoured.—M. chartered a ship to load a cargo at Cardiff, and proceed therewith to Madras, the freight to be paid in London on unloading and right delivery of the cargo; one third by M.'s acceptance at three months from the sailing of the ship (the same to be returned if the cargo were not duly delivered), and the remainder by like bill at three months from the date of delivery in London of the certificate of right delivery of the cargo. The charter-party provided for payment of a commission on the contract, ship lost or not lost, that the £150 should be advanced in cash at the port of discharge on account of the freight against the captain's draft on M. The cargo was loaded accordingly, a bill of lading was given for the same, and the ship sailed from Cardiff on the 8th October 1863, M. having consigned the cargo to A. & Co., who carried on business at Madras. On the same day the owners drew a bill on M. at three months for £261 1*s.* 10*d.*, being one third of the freight. On the 10th October 1863, the general agents in London of A. & Co., advanced to M., on A. & Co.'s account and out of their funds, £700, received as security for such advance the bill of lading blank, and endorsed and forwarded the same bill to A. & Co. On the 29th October 1863, M. accepted the bill for £261 1*s.* 10*d.*; and in the following December he suspended payment, and the bill was protested. On the 14th January 1864, the ship arrived at Madras, and thereupon A. & Co., as holders of the bill of lading, applied for the delivery of the cargo, and offered to advance the £150 in cash pursuant to the charter-party, but the captain claimed to retain the cargo for the value of the dishonoured bill and the balance of freight due. Held, that the terms of the contract were at variance with the right of lien so claimed, and that it was not suspended by the bill, nor revived by the freighters' insolvency. 3. ———— Freight.—Bill of lading.—Liability of master where quantity signed for is more than cargo shipped.—The plaintiff chartered a ship, of which he was master, to one C. H. C., of Calcutta, under a charter-party, by which it was agreed that the ship (which was then at Melbourne) should proceed to certain ports and there load a cargo for Calcutta, "the cargo to be delivered to the charterer at Calcutta, on being paid freight at and after the rate of the lump sum of £1,150 for the full reach of the ship; the said freight to be paid on the unloading and right delivery of the cargo as customary, less any advances that may have been made." On the arrival of the ship at Calcutta, C. H. C. requested the plaintiff to deliver the cargo to the defendants as his agents, which the plaintiff agreed to do on having payment of the freight guaranteed by the defendants. The defendants were bonâ fide holders of the bills of lading which had been signed by the plaintiff in respect of the cargo. They sent to the agents of the plaintiff in Calcutta the following letter: "As it will be necessary for us for the protection of our interests to get delivery of the cargo, and as we do not care about further trouble in the matter, we agree to guarantee payment of the balance of freight due on the charter-party, less any claims for short delivery," &c. On unloading there was found to be a deficiency in quantity between the goods mentioned in the bills of lading and those actually shipped and delivered. Held that, notwithstanding this, the plaintiff was entitled to the whole of the freight specified in the charter-party, and was justified in keeping the cargo until the freight was paid. 4. ——— Conditions precedent.— "Now on her passage."—Breach of warranty.—Principal and agent.—Undisclosed principal.—The plaintiffs entered into a contract of charter-party with the defendants, whereby it was agreed between them and the defendants acting for the owners, "that the steamer Atholl, now on her passage to Calcutta, being tight, staunch, and strong, &c., shall receive on board from the charterers a complete cargo of merchandise, to consist of 700 tons dead weight, and being so laden shall therewith proceed to London with liberty to call for any legal purpose at any intermediate port or ports; freight to be paid on the above cargo on right delivery of the same at and after the rate of £4-2-6 per ton; charterers to have the option of cancelling the charter-party, if the steamer has not arrived in Calcutta on 15th April 1871." The defendants signed the charter-party as "agents of steamer Atholl." The steamer was not, at the time the charter-party was entered into, on her way to Calcutta, being then in the port of London, and she did not start for some days after the date of the charter-party. She touched at Madras and Colombo on her way, and did not arrive in Calcutta until 11th April. Rates of freight having declined since the middle of March, at which time, it was alleged, the steamer ought to have arrived, the plaintiff sued the defendants for damages. Held, the defendants were liable. The statement in the charter-party that the streamer was on her passage to Calcutta was a condition precedent. SCHILLER v. FINLAY . . . 8 B. L. R., 544

5. ——— Ship unable to enter port or lie there without previous lightening.— "Safe port or as near thereunto as she may safely get always afloat."—Rights of parties.—Where a vessel is chartered to load a full and complete cargo, and being so loaded, to proceed therewith to a "safe port or so near thereunto as she may safely get, and deliver the same always afloat," the master is not bound to sign bills of lading for, or to sail to, a port where the vessel cannot, by reason of her draught of water, lie and discharge "always afloat" without being previously lightened, even if the cost of the requisite lightening would, by the charter-party, fall on the charterers. By the terms of a charter-party a vessel was to take in a full cargo at Bombay, and therewith proceed to a "safe port in the Mediterranean (Spanish ports excluded), as ordered on signing bills of lading, or so near thereunto as she may safely get, and deliver the same to the said charterers or their assignees always afloat." Marseilles was at first named as the port of discharge, but subsequently the vessel was ordered to Cette, a French port a little to the west of Marseilles; and bills of lading, made out for Cette, were tendered to the master for signature. The master refused to sign the bills of lading or sail for Cette. The vessel's draught of water when loaded was such that she could not have entered or lain afloat in Cette harbour without discharging a portion of her cargo. The cost of lightening the vessel by lighters outside the harbour would, under the charter-party, fall on the charterers, and they were willing to incur the expenses necessary for that purpose. Held, that it was no breach of the charter-party by the master to refuse to sail to Cette, or to sign bills of lading for that port. 6. ——— Principal and agent.— Charter-party signed by agents for master and owner.—Parties to suit.—Liability of master.—Liability of agents.—Master of ship, the agent of charterer, to sign bill of lading.—Right of master to recover from charterer sums paid by master as damages for short delivery of cargo.—Appropriation of payments.—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 69, 230, 235.—By a charter-party, dated 20th September 1880, F., M. & Co., as agents for master and owner, let the steam-ship Hutton to E., for a term of not less than three and not more than four months, for the sum of R15,000 per month payable in advance. By subsequent agreement the term was extended to 30th March 1881, and the charterer was to pay at the rate of R18,000 a month for the extended time. On 27th February 1881, the ship being about to proceed on her last voyage to Calcutta and thence to Bombay, E., finding himself unable to pay more than R6,000 out of the sum of R18,000, which was then due as hire for the month ending 9th March 1881, requested the plaintiff to pay F., M. & Co. on his behalf the remaining R12,000. The plaintiffs did so in consideration of an agreement, whereby E. assigned to them all the freight payable to E. and all benefits under the said charter-party in respect of the then intended voyage of the Hutton. It was also agreed between the plaintiffs and E. that the said ship should be consigned to the plaintiffs at Calcutta and also to them at Bombay, and that the plaintiffs should receive all the freight, passage-money, &c., to be recovered for the said voyage, the plaintiffs charging two per cent. commission on the gross value of the freight shipped in Calcutta and two per cent. on the amount of freight collected by them in Bombay, and interest on the said sum of R12,000 at the rate of nine per cent. per annum. Due notice of this agreement was given to F., M. & Co. On the 11th March, E., being unable to pay the R6,000, requested the plaintiffs to pay that sum to F., M. & Co. on his behalf, which the plaintiffs did,—E. agreeing that the said payment should be on the same terms as those on which the R12,000 had been paid. The ship, having proceeded to Calcutta, returned with cargo to

Bombay, where she arrived on 2nd April 1881. F., M. & Co., as agents for master and owner, refused to allow the plaintiffs to collect the freight payable in Bombay, and collected it themselves. The plaintiffs brought this suit, in the first instance, against the owner and the master of the Hutton (first and second defendants), praying for an account of the moneys received by the defendants or their agents in respect of the freight, and for payment of the balance found due after deducting the sums properly payable to the defandants for hire of the ship and for ₹400 damages sustained by the plaintiffs by reason of the wrongful act of the defendants, whereby the plaintiffs had been deprived of the two per cent. commission. The plaintiffs alleged that the balance due to them would be about ₹9,500. The first defendant did not appear. The second defendant (the master) contended that he was not liable; that F., M. & Co. had been especially appointed as agents of the owner; that they were not his (the master's) agents, and that they had no authority to sign the charter-party for him. He admitted that the sum of ₹12,000 had been paid to F., M. & Co. by the plaintiffs as agents for the owner; but as to the ₹6,000, he denied that it had been paid to F., M. & Co. on his account or on account of the owner. He further alleged that there was a large sum due by E. in respect of hire of the ship and other proper claims against him under the charter-party, and that the defendants were, therefore, justified in refusing the demands of the plaintiffs as assignees of E. until the whole of their claims against E. were liquidated. He alleged that F., M. & Co. had received the freight of the ship, amounting to ₹20,426, and he claimed a lien on this sum in respect of the sum of ₹19,282 due for hire and other charges on the said ship, and ₹605 for money paid for short delivery of goods. The plaintiffs subsequently made F., M. & Co. defendants to the suit. In their written statement, F., M. & Co. stated that they had signed the charter-party as agents only and not as principals, and they contended that the plaintiffs could not proceed simultaneously against the first defendant and the second defendant, but must elect to proceed separately against either; and, further, that the plaintiffs could not proceed simultaneously against themselves (F., M. & Co.) and the second defendant, but should elect to proceed separately against either. They admitted the receipt of the ₹12,000 as agents for the first defendant, and not as agents of the second defendant. As to the ₹6,000, they alleged that it had been paid to them, not on account of the Hutton, but in respect of claims which they had against E. in connection with the Clan Gordon, another ship which had been chartered by E. They admitted the receipt of the freight of the Hutton, amounting to ₹20,426, but claimed a lien on this sum in respect of hire and other proper charges due under the charter-party. Held, that the second defendant (the master) was not liable on the charter-party. He had given no authority to F., M. & Co. to sign it as his agents; and his conduct in acting under the charter-party, being referable to his character of, and duty as, master, did not amount to ratification. But, inasmuch as he claimed to deduct from the freight received in Bombay sums which were paid either by him or to F., M. & Co. for him, he was so far a proper party to the suit. Held also that, under section 230 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), F., M. & Co. were not liable as principals on the charter-party, as they appeared on the face of the charter-party to have signed merely as agents. But they were liable, under section 235 of the Contract Act, for having untruly represented themselves to be the authorised agents of the master to enter on his behalf into the contract therein contained. Their liability was limited to the amount which could have been recovered from the master if he had really been their principal. No difference was made in their liability by the fact that the owner was also liable. As to the ₹6,000,—Held, on the evidence, that the plaintiffs at the time of the payment had specifically appropriated this sum to the hire then due for the Hutton. Held, further, that the charter-party was one of the class known as "locatio navis et operarum magistri;" that under such a charter-party the master would, as between owner and charterer, sign bills of lading as agent of the charterer; that as between the owner and the charterer the latter was liable to defray the damages for non-performance of the contracts contained in the bills of lading, including damages for short delivery of cargo; and that, such being the liability of E. as charterer, the plaintiffs as his assignees were bound by all the equities affecting him, so that the defendants might set off as against the plaintiffs whatever the owner of the Hutton might have set off against E. if he had been the plaintiff. The second defendant (the master) alleged that he had paid in Bombay certain sums of money to consignees as damages for short delivery of cargo, and he claimed credit for such payments as against the plaintiffs. Held, that he had no power to bind E. by making such payments on his behalf in Bombay, where both E. and the plaintiffs were resident, without the consent either of E. or of the plaintiffs. In order to establish these charges against E. and his assignees (the plaintiffs), it was necessary for the defendants to prove either that they were, in fact, due, in which case the master would be justified in paying them under section 69 of the Contract Act, or that their correctness had been admitted by E. or his agents. The defendants having failed to produce the required proof, the claim of the second defendant was disallowed. HASONBHOY VISRAM v. CLAPHAM

——— Refusal by Bench of Judges to hear affidavits in support of application for transfer of trial to another district.—Application to the Chief Justice to appoint another Bench to hear and determine case.—Interlocutory order in criminal matters, Finality of.—High Court Charter Act (24 and 25 Vict., c. 104), s. 14.—Where a rule had been obtained on behalf of a prisoner, calling on the prosecution to show cause why the case should not be transferred for trial to some other Court of Session than that in which it was then pending, on the ground that such strong feeling and prejudice existed in the district against the accused as to render it unlikely that he would get a fair trial, a Division Bench of the High Court, duly constituted, consisting of two Judges, refused to allow the affidavits in support of the application to be read and discharged the rule. Subsequently, an application was made to the Chief Justice to appoint another Bench of the High Court to hear and determine the rule, on the ground that it had not been heard, and that consequently the order passed by the Bench discharging it was null and void. Held that the Chief Justice, having once appointed a Bench under section 14 of the Charter Act (24 and 25 Victoria, Cap. 104) to hear any particular case, has no power to interfere when the case has been disposed of by that Bench. Held, also, that the refusal of the Bench to hear the affidavits read, if an error at all, was simply one of law in the course of dealing with a matter clearly within their jurisdiction; and that, therefore, the decision could not be treated as a nullity, or its legality questioned by the Chief Justice. Held, further, that whether the judgment had been signed or not, previous to the application being made to the Chief Justice, an interlocutory order of such a nature in a criminal matter is not final, but may be reviewed or reconsidered, or a similar application may be entertained as often as the Court in its discretion may think proper. CHOTA NAGPORE TENURES ACT (Bengal Act II of 1869).

——— Powers of Special Commissioner.—The scope and object of Bengal Act II of 1869 is to determine the quantity of lands of certain specified descriptions within villages, to which the Special Commissioner, named under the Act, may have been appointed. Nothing in the Act empowers an officer so appointed to determine a question of disputed boundary between two villages, and to oust the Civil Courts of their ordinary jurisdiction in determining the rights of parties under conflicting titles as proprietors of such villages. 3. ——— Evidence as to position of.—Local investigation.—Maps.—In a dispute as to the position of chur lands, where the change in the course of a river threw doubt upon their position, the judgment of the Court of first instance, given after local investigation, was upheld against the decision of the High Court founded on inspection of the maps and on the arguments adduced before it.
